About the Exhibitor

Nick St. Clair is a man with autism who once had a passion for cartoons since the age of 2. When he developed his talent to draw, he started to show his work to people in which he began to develop social skills at the same time despite his early struggles with autism. He still draws to this day and his current work "The World Series of Autism" has been displayed in over 10 different libraries in New Jersey. We hope the people of South Amboy and the rest of New Jersey get to enjoy this series as much as I did making it.
