About the Artist

Nowadays, the name Janet Markman has become synonymous with Nature Photography – more specifically, Bird Photography. While she has always been fascinated with nature, her true creative passion, observing and photographing birds, has expanded to include other winged wonders –notably picturesque butterflies and moths. Fascinated by their behaviors and antics, “I was motivated to observing other birds out in the wild. So, I joined the Montclair Bird Club, began going on bird walks, and joined photo clubs. In April 2005, I purchased my first digital camera and started photographing birds I saw in the wild.”

Besides being an active member of the Essex Photo Club she is a member of the West Essex Art Association, Studio Montclair, Montclair Bird Club, and National Audubon Society, as well as the Caldwell Public Library Foundation and her local historical society. Janet is also the Official Photographer for the Borough of Caldwell for the past eight years. Janet’s photos have won numerous awards and continue to entertain viewers. As Janet puts it, “I hope that through my work, people will better appreciate the natural world and the beauty that is out there. I really enjoy sharing with others the variety of nature’s wonders that I experience through my camera lens.”
