

DEIBERT MADE CUSTODIAN

The City Collector Will Handle School Moneys at a Salary of $10 Per Month—Miss Everitt Suspended as Teacher For Not Being Present When Schools Opened.

The Board of Education held a special meeting Wednesday evening and among other important business transacted was the appointment of Frederick Diebert, present city collector, as the custodian of school moneys and the suspension of Miss Media Everitt, one of the two special teachers.

The resolution offered by Mr. Mason at the last regular meeting and referred to a committee for legal advice was taken up by the board upon proper motion. The committee had evidently been apprised of the fact that the appointment of the collector was the only way in which they could secure immediate relief from the embarrassing position in which they were placed because of the inability of the board to pay bills. The resolution referred to was published in full in our issue of two weeks ago and at the meeting Wednesday evening was amended slightly. Objection was raised to the wording of the resolution in that it would appoint the collector as custodian regardless of the encumbrance and also because no specified time was mentioned. The amendments were made to appoint Mr. Diebert as custodian at a salary of ten dollars per month instead of a hundred and twenty dollars per year.

The above action was the outcome of the refusal of the treasurer of the city, Mr. Elwood R. Brown, to perform the duties in connection with the custodianship unless additional compensation was awarded him.

With regard to the action taken as affecting Miss Everitt the matter was first brought up formally by Mr. Little. It was upon a motion offered by Mr. Grace that the action was finally decided upon. From the discussion it would seem that Miss Everitt had violated the provisions of her contract or else the rules and regulations which govern the schools. In any case she had not as yet reported for duty and from a communication in the hands of the president didn't expect to until September 11. It was stated that she had gone to the San Francisco Exposition and had advised that she was returning on the Steamer Finland via the Panama Canal route. This boat was due to arrive at New York on the date above mentioned and from newspaper accounts would probably be several days late in arriving. This delay was on account of a recent slide in the canal which would hold up the boats passing through the waterway for ten days or more. It was pointed out by members of the board that if Miss Everitt had desired to be here for the opening of schools she could have abandoned the Panama Canal portion of the trip and returned by rail instead in ample time. It seemed to be the consensus of opinion that it was only right and proper for the board to take some action in such a case but that it was regrettable, in view of past unpleasantness, the teacher in question should have been Miss Everitt. An investigation will undoubtedly be made and a plausible explanation doubtless accepted.

Although the meeting was called only for a special purpose the board took up some few pressing bills and instructed the secretary to issue drafts covering them. These bills were for manual labor in connection with the cleaning of the buildings preparatory to the re-opening of the schools, it being explained that the persons who had performed the work were in need of the money. A large number of other bills will come up at the regular meeting a few weeks hence.

City Superintendent Barr stated that the enrollment of pupils in the schools was larger this year than it had ever been at this time and that there were still a large number of pupils to come in. The total number enrolled was seven hundred and three. As a result there is quite some overcrowding of the pupils and it is very likely that additional desk room will be found necessary. It was brought out that in the sixth grade one teacher had forty-five pupils and another forty-two. The greatest overflow was in the fifth grade where there was seating capacity for only eighty-nine whereas there were a hundred and nine pupils. After some discussion Mr. Barr was requested to furnish the board with a tabulated statement showing the capacity and enrollment of each grade at the regular meeting. At that time the matter could be thrashed out and provisions made. Mr. Grace asked that the Sayreville pupils be noted so that they would tell whether it was the Sayreville pupils that caused the crowding or not. If so he advocated having them transferred to the New Brunswick schools where the High School pupils from Sayreville all go.

The building and grounds committee was authorized to have a number of broken desks taken apart and the sound parts used in making up good desks. The supplies committee was authorized to procure some histories, arithmetics, etc., requested by Professor Barr.

Professor Barr also stated that there were eighty-five pupils in the High School at present. Also that to take care of the overflow in the fifth grade he had been forced to give one of the fourth grade teachers a number of fifth grade pupils. This it was explained would result in these pupils getting less than full periods in some subjects. While unsatisfactory, it was the best he could do for the present and the board perforce let it go at that.

HAUSSER-IVINS.

Jacob Hausser of this city and Miss Florence Ivins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Ivins, of Jamesburg, were united in marriage last Saturday night by the Rev. Laurence Carroll, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Hightstown. The only attendant was Miss Marion Ivins, a sister of the bride.

The groom is employed by the Raritan River Railroad, and on their return from their honeymoon, the happy couple will make their home in this city.

WOMAN'S CLUB MEETS

ON THURSDAY NEXT

The regular monthly meetings of the Woman's Club will be resumed next Thursday afternoon for the winter season. This meeting will mark the opening of the third season for the activities of this most successful organization.

MRS. JAMES CULLEN.

Mrs. James Cullen passed away last Saturday evening at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Edward J. O'Connor, at the ripe old age of eighty years. Mrs. Cullen had made her home in this city all her life, until a few years ago when she removed to New Brunswick with her husband. Following the death of Mr. Cullen she continued to make her home in the county seat until a few weeks ago when she became ill and was brought to this city and to the home of her only child.

Funeral services were held in St. Mary's Church on Monday morning at ten o'clock when the Rev. E. P. Kennedy celebrated a high mass of requiem. Following the services the funeral party journeyed to New Brunswick by automobile where interment was made in St. Peter's cemetery, under the direction of Undertaker Scully of this city. The pall bearers were, Messrs. George Gundrum, John Connors, John Brancey, Joseph Gayton and two grandsons, Edward and Vincent O'Connor.

The management of the Morgan Dancing pavilion announces that for the balance of the season, as long as conditions warrant, the Pavilion will be opened on Saturday nights only. All lovers of good music and dancing should not miss this opportunity, as the continuance depends upon the attendance.

TAKE NOTICE.

All members of the South Amboy Liederkreis are hereby requested to attend a regular communication in Steinerwald's Hall on Saturday, Sept. 11th, 1915, at 9 p. m. on account of very important business to transact.

JOSEPH WILSON CALLED TO REST

Dies of Heart Trouble After Only a Brief Illness—Was One of Our Best Citizens—Prominent in the Order of Knights of Pythias and a Faithful Church Worker.

It becomes our sad privilege to record this week the death of Joseph Wilson, who departed this life about 10 o'clock Saturday evening, September 4, at his home on Main street at the age of fifty-seven years.

Mr. Wilson's illness had only covered about five weeks. He had always enjoyed good health, and the announcement that he was ill came as a surprise to his many friends, none of whom had any doubt but that he would soon again recover his usual good health, but it was willed otherwise as serious heart trouble set in, causing his death.

Mr. Wilson stood high in the estimation of his fellow men. He was of exemplary habits, honest and upright. When a mere boy he came to this city from Bordentown when his late father took charge of the ship-building industry of the Camden & Amboy Railroad, then a very flourishing yard in this city. After completing his education in the public schools, he secured employment in the shipyard and learned the trade, and finally advanced to the drafting and office department. When the shipyard was abandoned some years ago Mr. Wilson was retained under the title of foreman, and principally acted as appraiser of damages on boats caused while in tow of the railroad company's tugs. Only recently by his strict attention to his duties he was promoted to the position of motive power inspector with offices in this city and New York.

In politics Mr. Wilson was a Republican, and had secured terms as collector and registrar of vital statistics. At the time of his death he was a member of the Board of Health.

Mr. Wilson was a member of St. Stephen's Lodge, No. 63, F. & A. M., Good Samaritan Lodge No. 52, K. of P., and Sterling Castle No. 50, K. G. E. He took a great interest in the Pythian order and was a past grand Chancellor, and had served the State as Supreme Representative. After the Knights of Pythias' Hall was built, Mr. Wilson was made treasurer and business manager, which position he held up to the time of his death. Notwithstanding Mr. Wilson's many duties he found time to serve his church and serve it well. He was a warden and treasurer of Christ Church, and was a great helper in all church work. Being a man of sound judgment his advice often proved of great benefit to the parish. His services will be greatly missed, and his death keenly felt by the parish.

Mr. Wilson was a charter member and took an active part in the organization of the P. R. R. Y. M. C. A. in this city. He was elected a member of the Board of Management March 21, 1906, and served on this committee continuously to the day of his death. He was chosen chairman of the Board from 1907 to 1909, and from 1911 to 1916, having served seven years as chairman. Mr. Wilson gave valuable service on other committees, viz.: Finance, Auditing and Advisory. The association loses one who was wholehearted and thoroughly enthused in the association's real work. The loss is great, the real value of the man to the association being known only to a few.

Mr. Wilson is survived by a widow, his mother, and a brother, William Wilson, who resides at Bordentown.

The funeral was held in Christ Church at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, and was attended by a large number of people. Good Samaritan Lodge No. 52, K. of P., attended in a body. The service was conducted by the Rev. Chapman S. Lewis, and the vested choir rendered the singing. Interment followed in Christ Church cemetery. At the grave the Knights of Pythias observed their burial ritual. There was a large assortment of flowers, many of the pieces being of special design. The bearers were Messrs. William and Arthur Pearce, Roy Barker, Albin Van Dusen, Allan Wilson and Isaac Selover, all nephews of the deceased.

Several of the officers of the Grand Lodge, K. of P., were present at the funeral.

Wins Championship Of Barnegat Bay

Mr. J. Ridgway Such of this city is an enthusiastic yachtsman and enjoys nothing better than to hold down the tiller of a smart yacht in a stiff breeze and flowing sea. He is the proud possessor of a cat rigged yacht, which is very speedy. Her name is the "Frolie," not a misnomer by any means, as she is able to play all kinds of pranks on the sailing craft of her class in Barnegat bay.

Mr. Such spends his summers at Mantoloking and is a member of the Barnegat Bay Yacht Racing Association, which gives him an opportunity to try out the merits of his pretty little sailing craft. He entered the "Frolie" in the point races of the association for the championship of Barnegat bay, and won out handsomely both in the men's and ladies' series. The following table shows points scored:

Men's Series, 11 Races.
	1st	2nd	3rd	Points
Frolie	4	1		23
Resolute	3	2	1	22
Pleasant	1	3		14
Mystery	1	1	2	10
Coquette	1		1	6
Vanite	1		1	6

Ladies' Series, 4 Races.
	1st	2nd	3rd	Points
Frolie	1	1		13
Goodenuff	1	1		8
Resolute	1			5

The first race was sailed July 3, and last race September 6. Only names of boats winning one or more first prizes are given. A large number of other boats competed in the several races.

The Frolie won championship pennant in both series, and was sailed by Mr. Such in the men's races, and by Mrs. Runyon Colic, of Newark, in the ladies' races.

FUNERAL OF MRS.

CATHERINE CARROLL

Funeral services for the late Mrs. Catherine Carroll were held from St. Mary's church at nine o'clock last Monday morning, and were largely attended. A high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. E. P. Kennedy and later interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery. The pall bearers were Frank Miller, Edward Mc Donough, John Coan, Edgar Emmons, Timothy Sullivan and Frank Gordon.

MRS. ANN FISH.

Mrs. Ann Fish, wife of Capt. Charles Fish, deceased, departed this life on Monday, last at the Parker Memorial Home, New Brunswick, at the age of 92 years.

Mrs. Fish was a former resident of this city, having lived for many years on the corner of second street and Broadway, in the house now occupied by E. C. Aiken. Her husband at one time ran the old Swan Hill Pottery.

TWO MACHINES DAMAGED.

Last Monday afternoon two automobiles collided near Christ Church cemetery but none of the occupants was injured. The machines were a Maxwell and an Overland both touring cars. The driver of the Overland was rather inexperienced and in some way ran into the other machine. Both machines were towed to Miller's Garage where repairs were made. The Maxwell escaped with a bent front axle, running boards torn off and mud guards bent. The Overland had a bent frame on both sides; mud guards bent and other damage.

THE SUFFRAGISTS ARE COMING.

A Woman Suffrage Squadron of automobiles with speakers will pass through South Amboy Saturday, Sept. 18, at 1:15 o'clock p. m. The automobiles with suffrage banners and pennants will escort the speakers, leaving Dunellen, at 9 o'clock in the morning, passing through South Amboy to Jamesburg, arriving in New Brunswick for a series of evening meetings. The speeches in this city will be made from machines at Broadway and David street, and literature will be given out to all present.

Further details will appear in next week's issue.

WIDOW LOSES DAMAGE SUIT

Mrs. Richard Parisen Appeals to Court For Compensation Under Liability Act For Death of Husband—Court Rules That Plaintiff Was Not Entitled to Damages.

The suit of Mrs. Cornelia Parisen, of David street, against the New York and Long Branch Railroad for compensation under the employer's liability law for the death of her husband, Richard F. Parisen, came up before Judge Peter F. Daly on Friday, Sept. 3. The court ruled that the plaintiff was not entitled to any benefit under the provisions of the act and the suit was therefore dismissed.

The suit asked for compensation for 300 weeks at the rate of $10 per week and $100 for expenses attendant upon the funeral. Parisen is survived by five children besides his widow. The children are: Elmer, aged sixteen; Bertha, aged fifteen; Gladys, aged eleven; Mildred, aged seven; and Florence, aged four.

Testimony was introduced to show that Parisen was in the employ of the New York and Long Branch Railroad and that he evidently met his death by either falling or being knocked off the railroad bridge over the Raritan River on the night of November 10th last. The body was not recovered until about five months later when it was found on the marshes near the County Bridge.

Parisen had gone out on the bridge to relieve a signalman named Albin Ginter, who had reported sick. William S. Day testified that he had not given direct orders to Parisen but told James Rea to get a man to relieve Ginter. Rea testified that he had attempted to get three men before going after Parisen. William Splice, Harry Stonaker, James Rea and Ernest Zinkham testified to having seen the man on the evening of November 10th, and all judged him of being in full possession of all his faculties. Albin Ginter maintained that Parisen was intoxicated and irresponsible.

Ginter had recovered before Parisen arrived to relieve him and had decided to finish out the night's work. It is supposed. Ginter was the last person to see Parisen alive.

It is thought that an appeal will be taken by the plaintiff from the decision handed down by Judge Daly. Attorney Thomas Brown represented Mrs. Parisen in the case at New Brunswick.

CAMP MEETING

A large number of railroad people from this city were at Ocean Grove on Friday, September 3, and attended the railroad day camp meeting. It was a big affair, the program being a most extensive and interesting one. The railroad men in numbers and service gave Ocean Grove Camp meeting one of the biggest and best days in the history of the association. Homer Rodeheaver and Dr. George Wood Anderson took active part in the services.

The principal representatives from this city were Rev. J. E. Shaw, Rev. H. C. White, Rev. E. R. Titton, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Ware, J. Lee Larow, General Secretary and Mrs. F. A. Deacon.

TRAINMAN INJURED.

Frank Popiez, of Mechanicsville, was injured while working as a flagman on a freight train at Pavonia one day last week. It is said that Popiez leaned out to look ahead and was struck in the forehead by a car standing on the track next to the one on which his train was moving. At first it was feared he was dangerously injured and the injured man was rushed to the hospital. Seven stitches were necessary to close the gash in Popiez's forehead but he was able to leave the institution within a day or two. Popiez has not as yet felt able to resume the performance of his duties.

Big Game Between Powderworkers Sunday

The Parlin Powder-Works team will again cross bats with the Dupont nine from Haskell, N. J., at Parlin on this Sunday afternoon at 3:15 p. m. and will try to repeat their victory of three weeks ago when they trimmed the Haskell bunch.

Maluski and Limerick will be the battery for the Parlin team. Haskell is coming down to Parlin with a stronger team than before and expect to bring a big crowd of enthusiastic rooters to help them "take home the bacon," but they will have to "go some" to get the game away from Parlin. Manager "Jeff" Freeman, who looks like Connie Mack and gets around like "Ty" Cobb, says it'll be two straight for Parlin.

LECTURE AT EMPIRE THEATRE.

A lecture on "Social Needs for Equal Suffrage" will be given by Dr. Harriette M. Dilla at new Empire Theatre Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 15, at 2:30 o'clock. Everybody invited. Opportunity for discussion will be offered. Go and hear this talk on woman suffrage.

Dr. Dilla received her doctorate from Columbia University, New York City, and occupies the Chair of Government and Social Science in Lake Erie College, Ohio. She is especially interested in practical social service and has devoted much of her time to voluntary residence in reformatory and prison institutions to study the causes and conditions of criminality and the methods of care and treatment. She occupies the position of "Big Sister" to nearly a hundred young girls and boys whom she assists in getting a start after they are paroled from the reform schools. She is conversant with social conditions here and abroad, and looks at equal suffrage as one of the means of improving many hard conditions of society.

MANY AUTOMOBILES NEED SERVICES OF A MACHINIST

The unusually heavy automobile traffic through this city over the week end and holidays resulted in a number of minor accidents in this vicinity. George Delaney, who runs an up-to-date garage and machine shop on Stevens avenue near Fourth street, was called on to do a great deal of the repair work upon the crippled machines.

Friday night a big Chalmers car from Newark broke a driving shaft coming out of the "Hole-in-the-Wall." Delaney towed the machine to his garage and made repairs so the car was able to proceed on its way early Saturday afternoon.

Saturday afternoon he was called to tow in a Dragon automobile. The car belonged to a New York party and had broken a shaft in the transmission. The accident occurred near this end of the County Bridge. Repairs were completed on Tuesday.

Monday night a Stutz machine stopped at the garage with a broken spring. The machine proceeded next morning after repairs were made to the broken spring.

Delaney also repaired a Reo machine on Stevens avenue Monday night. The machine belonged in Orange and the trouble was stripped clutch bolts. A couple of hours work sent the Reo again on its way.

STATE WILL NOW PAY BILLS
PROMPTLY AND SAVE DISCOUNT

Trenton, Sept. 10.—The most practical answer possible to make to the Republican charges of incompetence on the part of the Democratic administration of this State, has just been made by State Comptroller Edward I. Edwards. During the 1915 session of the Legislature, and since that time, the Republicans have been lavish with their claims that the treasury of the State was in a depleted condition because of the extravagances of the Democrats.

It will be remembered that the leaders of the G. O. P. made a concerted attack upon the financial officers of the State and that they were unable to present one iota of evidence that the State was not being managed in a highly satisfactorily and businesslike way. It will also be recalled how the claims of the Republicans to discredit the administration failed ignominiously and the close of the Legislature showed that the finances were in the best condition that they have been for many years. The Republican assertion that a State-tax was forthcoming was proven to be a false one and the people of New Jersey expressed their confidence in the management of the Democrats.

The latest announcement by the Democratic Comptroller, however, is unique in the history of government. For some years there has been a feeling that it did not pay to do business with the State because of the necessary red-tape in connection with the payment of the bills. Of course the State has always been sure pay but where such an enormous amount of money is handled there must be necessarily some little delay.

Comptroller Edwards now says that the State is ready to do business in a way to compete with the best managed business houses in the country. He says that the state is ready to make immediate payment for all bills that carry a discount. He has notified the head of every department and institution that the Comptroller's office is to be notified immediately when they purchase goods that carry a discount for immediate payment. These bills are to be sent to the Comptroller's office upon their receipt and the money for their payment will be sent at once.

The State Comptroller announces that there is no reason now why every department should not take advantage of discounts. The State has money in the treasury and there will be thousands of dollars saved to the taxpayers yearly.

This is the Democratic way of doing business. The Auditor's Department of the State Comptroller's office has made a study for years of the business of the finances of the State and John J. Nevin, the chief auditor, states that hereafter the transactions between the Commonwealth and business houses will be carried on the same as the dealings between two large concerns. The State wants the advantage of every nickel possible in the way of discount so that the people of the State will get full value received.

This is the sort of business management that the party is to stand for in the future. It has brought the affairs of the State to this position and now they will seek to keep them going in a purely business-like and practical manner.

Wills in Argentina.

In Argentina the laws provide that a father must leave his children four-fifths of his fortune, and a husband, if he has no children, has to leave half of his property to his wife. An unmarried son is compelled to leave his parents two-thirds of his property, and only unmarried persons without parents or descendants can make wills disposing of their possessions as they see fit.

Auto Collides With Trolley Car.

Colliding with a Public Service trolley car at Smith and Prospect streets, Perth Amboy, an automobile filled with Montclair people was damaged and three women passengers were painfully injured Sunday afternoon. The car was owned and driven by P. J. Cosgrove of 207 Park street, Montclair. His wife's lip was cut and her right ankle sprained. Mrs. A. B. Cosgrove, her sister-in-law, suffered a bruise on her leg, and Mrs. E. G. Gillmore received similar injuries.

Six Autoists Nabbed in Red Bank.

Visiting Red Bank Saturday night with a corps of five detectives from the motor vehicle department, Anderson Shinn of Burlington, deputy chief of the department, with the co-operation of Sergeant Harry Van Note of the local police, arrested six autoists on charges that they were driving cars with dazzling headlights. Recorder Moses L. Johnson fined five of them $5 and costs each. Those arrested were Joseph Svec, New York; C. M. Harris, Scranton, Pa.; Charles McAlpin Pye, Morristown; Howard P. Johnson, Lakewood, and Peter McClees, Red Bank. Fred R. Bolce, proprietor of a local garage, was also apprehended and was fined $2.50. He was trying out a new car, which had a dinner attachment operated from the seat.

One of the policemen toured the borough and took the numbers of all cars pulled up at the curb without the headlights and taillights lighted. The numbers will be forwarded to the motor vehicle department and owners will be notified of their violations by letter.

J. Turner Brakeley's Will Probated.

The will of J. Turner Brakeley, son of the late Rev. Dr. John H. Brakeley, who instituted and conducted the Bordentown Female College, at Bordentown, was admitted to probate in the Burlington County Surrogate's Office at Mt. Holly Saturday. His estate is valued at $40,000. The sole beneficiary is Miss Mary Brakeley of Belvidere, a first cousin of the deceased.

Will Make Italian Soldiers' Garments

Sigmund Eisner's factories throughout the state commenced work Tuesday on approximately a million garments for the Italian Government, which will run into millions of dollars. Additional contracts were signed last week and to turn out this work much more help is needed. To handle the new contract a new building is being erected at Red Bank.

The garments, besides the big overcoat contract of about 200,000, comprise three-piece uniforms, consisting of coat, trousers and vests. Mr. Eisner is also filling large blanket orders for the Italian Government.

Avers Dogs Were Poisoned.

Suit has been begun by Dr. O. C. Bogardus of Keyport, former sheriff of Monmouth County, against a woman neighbor for the alleged poisoning of his three dogs a few weeks ago while he was in the Pocono Mountains. The caretaker of his premises entered the barn to feed the dogs, found them dead and got in touch with the doctor over the telephone. The dogs were used by the doctor in his hunting trips, which he takes all over the United States, and were highly prized by him, aside from their value as pedigreed animals.

The stomachs of the animals were removed and sent for analysis, and it was found that they contained liver mixed with strychnine. The doctor obtained the legal services of former Governor J. Franklin Fort and later he obtained what he regarded as a basis for action.

Acetylene Gas Explodes on Yacht.

Acetylene gas which escaped from a leaky pipe on board William Langbein's yacht Clara, which anchored off Irwin's dock, Red Bank, Saturday after making the trip from Canarsie, N. Y., where Mr. Langbein is engaged in the manufacture of cutlery, exploded Saturday night, blowing out the bow of the boat and wrecking the interior of the cabin.

John Langbein, five years old, received a severe cut on the left hand and both of his ankles were sprained. William Langbein, seven, and Mrs. Langbein who was preparing the two boys for bed, were not hurt, though they and others on board were badly shaken up. The injured boy was taken to Captain Charles Irwin's residence, where Dr. William D. Sayre attended his injuries.

The acetylene tank is in the after part of the boat and a pipe runs under the floor. The gas leaked out of the pipe and found its way between the ceiling to an overhead chamber, where it ignited when the cabin light was lit. The noise of the explosion and the screams of those on board brought instant help from Captain Charles Irwin's boat works. The craft was towed to shallow water where it was found that a hole had been torn in the side of the boat about an inch above the water line. The Clara is a forty-five-foot gasoline cruiser, valued at about $5,000. Mr. Langbein had a number of guests on board.

Editor Is Fatally Injured by Auto.

James Petrie, sixty years old, editor of The Enterprise, a weekly paper published in East Rutherford, died at the General Hospital, Passaic, Monday morning from injuries received a short time before, when he was struck by an automobile at Paterson avenue and River road, between Wallington and East Rutherford. The automobile was owned and driven by Louis Pounds of 311 Twelfth street, Paterson. Pounds is being held pending the action of the Bergen County authorities.

According to spectators, Mr. Petrie became dazed when he saw an automobile and a trolley car, both going in the same direction, coming toward him. Pounds was on his way down Paterson avenue. The front of the car struck Petrie, throwing him to the side of the road. Several women were in the car with Pounds, on their way to Rockaway Beach to spend the holiday.

Mr. Petrie was one of the oldest printers in lower Bergen County. Besides his wife, he is survived by three sons and a daughter.

Made State Railroads Director.

On Tuesday Robert D. Foote, the Morristown banker, was appointed by Governor Fielder to succeed the late Griffith W. Lewis of Burlington as state director of railroads. Mr. Foote will serve ad interim pending the election of a new director by the Legislature in joint session. Mr. Foote held the position some years ago when the Democrats controlled the Legislature on joint ballot.

The state director of railroads has become largely a nominal position. It carries with it no salary, but the incumbent receives free railroad transportation. The position was created many years ago when the state became a stockholder in the United New Jersey Railroads and Canal Company, the director being named to care for the state's interest as a stockholder.

Mr. Foote is regarded as the Democratic leader of Morris County.

William E. Condon.

William E. Condon, father of Dr. William J. Condon, of New Brunswick, died Tuesday night at St. Peter's Hospital. He had been ill two years with heart trouble. He was sixty-five years old. From 1878 to 1890 he was a justice of the peace in New Brunswick and later connected with the hospital office at the State Home for Boys at Jamesburg. Besides his widow and son he leaves a brother-in-law, William J. McDede of New Brunswick.

Youth Stole Rig, Is Charged.

A young man, who gave his name as James Bush, twenty years old, is locked up at Baysville, Ocean County, charged with stealing a horse and wagon from Morris Murphy of Bordentown. Bush hired the horse and wagon Saturday to go to Groverville, a few miles from Bordentown, saying he would return that afternoon. Since that time nothing had been seen of him. Bush is said to belong at May's Landing.

William A. Fountain.

William A. Fountain, seventy-seven years old, died Wednesday morning at the home of his son-in-law, W. A. Close, Matawan. Mr. Fountain was collector of the Borough of Matawan, justice of the peace and was in the insurance business. He had been an active fireman and a member of the volunteer fire department since its organization in 1869. He is survived by a daughter with whom he made his home, and one son, Robert Fountain, cashier of the First National Bank, South River.

PROMINENT JUDGES FOR POULTRY SHOW

Leading Officials Selected to Award Prizes at Trenton Interstate Fair.

Awards of prizes in the poultry department of the Trenton Interstate Fair are to be made again this year by judges who have gained positions of prominence in the work. They are noted not only for their integrity, but for their ability, and have officiated at the largest shows in the United States. The Fair is to be held from Sept. 27 to Oct. 1.

Reese V. Hicks, manager of the Hancock Farms at Browns Mills, has been added to the officials who gave such universal satisfaction, last year.

To still further strengthen his force, Harvey E. Rogers, the superintendent, prevailed upon Mr. Hicks to act. Mr. Hicks was twice president of the American Poultry association and formerly editor of Poultry Culture of Kansas. He is recognized as one of the foremost Rhode Island Red judges in America and was chosen to serve at the Panama-Pacific exposition.

The list of judges follows:
Reese V. Hicks of Browns Mills, N. J.; H. P. Schwab, Irondequoit, N. Y.; J. V. Courtney Punderford, French, N. J.; J. Harry Wolsieffer, Vineland, N. J., and William G. Minch, Carlisle, Pa.

The Judge of the pigeon department will be Reuben Gibbs of Trenton.

The indications for the Trenton exposition are that one of the largest poultry shows ever prepared for New Jersey will be seen this year. Superintendent Rogers is president of the Mercer County Poultry association and also a member of the executive committee of the New Jersey State Poultry association. He is thoroughly informed on the progress made in the bird industry, and his ability to arrange an exhibition worth traveling to see was demonstrated last year.

A BATTLE OF THE WINDS.

When Boreas and Notus Rage at Each Other on the Bosphorus.

By a strange phenomenon, if the south wind prevails the superficial current of the Bosphorus is reversed, though the inferior current continues its accustomed course. Then the waters on the surface are piled tumultuously back upon one another, and the quays, which are several feet above the ordinary Bosphorus level, are flooded and perhaps made impassable. At such times calques and smaller boats do not dare to venture upon the tempestuous surface.

Sometimes a strong wind blows northward from the Marmora, and another wind as strong blows with equal violence southward from the Black sea. Then, as one gazes from some central point like Roumel Hisar, he beholds ships under full sail majestically approaching each other from both directions till at last they are only two or three miles apart. Between them lies a belt of moveless sea, into which they drift helplessly about and perhaps crash into each other's sides.

This is a duel royal between Boreas and Notus and may continue for hours. Gradually the zone of calm is forced north or south. At last one wind withdraws like a defeated champion from the arena. The ships which it has brought thus far drop their anchors and wait or else hire one of the numerous steam tugs which are paddling expectantly about. The ships which have come with the victorious wind triumphantly resume their course, and meanwhile their sailors mock and jeer their fellow mariners whose breeze has failed them.—From "Constantinople," by Dr. Edwin A. Grosvenor.

Clothes in Colonial Days.

When Salem was settled the Massachusetts Bay company furnished clothes for all the men who immigrated and settled in that town. Every man had four pairs of shoes, four pairs of stockings, a pair of Norwich garters, four shirts, two suits of doublets, a pair of hose of leather lined with oilskin, a wooden suit lined with leather, four bands, two handkerchiefs, a green cotton waistcoat, a leather belt, a woolen cap, a black hat, two red knit caps, two pairs of gloves, a cloak lined with cotton and an extra pair of breeches.

Good fortune seldom travels around in an automobile looking for you.

It's easy to be an optimist so long as the bright side only is visible.

Ralph Peters
On Railway Mail Pay

A controversy has been raging in the columns of the press between the railroads and the Federal Post Office Department over the question of proper compensation for handling the United States mails. Mr. Ralph Peters, Chairman of the Railway Mail Committee, when asked to state the railroad side of the controversy to the American farmer, said in part:

"The railway mail pay question will be settled—and settled permanently and with justice to all concerned—as soon as the American people realize that the whole subject, while seemingly complicated and technical, boils down to a few simple points of fair business dealing which no one need be a rate expert to understand.

"The first is that the Post Office Department weighs the mails, and adjusts the pay of the railroads, only once in four years. This compels the railroads to carry the increase in the mail tonnage during the intervening years without pay—manifestly an injustice in the case of a rapidly growing business. One consequence has been that last year the railroads carried fully half the parcel post for nothing.

"A second point is this: In addition to carrying the mails, the railroads are required to operate many traveling post offices for sorting and distributing the mails while in transit. But the Post Office Department pays for such post offices only where they occupy whole cars, and pays nothing in the many cases in which it merely requires the use of post office apartments in combination cars, although such apartments differ from the full railway post office cars only in size. More than 4,300 apartments of this character have been fitted up, and are maintained for the exclusive use of the Post Office Department. Failure to pay for them has been an especial hardship to the smaller roads on which the Department does not find it necessary to utilize whole cars.

"One last point: In thousands of instances (though not in all) the Post Office Department requires the railroads to carry the mails back and forth between railroad stations and post offices, but pays them nothing for this extra service beyond the rates covering the rail transportation. The railroads have no choice but to perform this additional service gratis, or refuse to carry the mails at all.

"Now for the remedies the railroads ask: They do not ask to have the mails weighed daily, or to have each shipment weighed and paid for separately, as is done in the case of private shippers. They merely ask to have the mails weighed, and the pay of the railroads adjusted, at least once a year, instead of once in four years. They also ask that apartment post office cars be paid for at reasonable rates, according to size. Lastly, they ask that the Post Office Department cease to require of them free messenger service between stations and post offices, and either relieve them of this service or pay fairly for it. These are the reforms the railroads ask of Congress. They gladly lay these reforms before the public, confident that they will appeal to the common sense and fairness of American voters."

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1915.

The automobile traffic through this city on Saturday, Sunday and Monday last was the heaviest ever known, and all this notwithstanding the out of town press would have us to believe that all traffic to the shore would be by the way of New Brunswick. The time is near at hand when we will have an excellent road between this city and Keyport, and we doubt if many moons will pass before we will have a much improved roadway through Mechanicsville to the Amboy bridge. The people of Mechanicsville have been panned up long enough, and the outlook is promising that they will have a respectable opening under the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

Dr. Dumba, the Austrian Ambassador, has been told to pack his trunk and go home. This is due to the fact that he planned to instigate strikes in American manufacturing plants engaged in the production of munitions of war. No regrets will be expressed at his parting.

WEIGH THEIR HATS.

A Fad of Fussy Men Who Are Cranks in the Matter of Headwear.

In the back part of a Broadway hatter's store there is a pair of scales that are used only in the case of particular demands by particular customers. As a general thing, you don't look for scales in a hatter's, and the proprietor explained his reason for having them in this way:

"You will often find very fussy men when it comes to buying a hat. With them the weight of headgear is of prime importance. An ounce more or less gives them the fidgets when they have made a rule of life to wear only such and such weights on their heads. So I keep the scales to convince them. It is well that I do. It has settled many an argument with a grudge and sold me many a hat.

"You may call them queer for wanting the exact weight they call for or within and not over that weight; but, come to think it over, they are not any queerer than the men who rush in here at the beginning of summer demanding summer headgear because they simply can't endure their heavy winter hats any longer.

"Well, they buy a straw and go away perfectly satisfied they are prepared for summer heat. And the hat they buy? Why, by actual weight on these very scales it often weighs two to four ounces more than the winter hat they have been wearing. One of our good customers has regularly shifted from a twelve ounce winter slouch to a fifteen ounce summer straw and has been happy in the change."

It is a fact, however, that thousands of men know the truth of what the Broadway hatter says, but still buy heavy straws.—New York Sun.

Babies in Samoa.

Samoa babies can give points to Europeans apparently. According to A. S. Middleton in "Sailor and Beach-comber," they are much prettier and very intelligent. Moreover:

"They can swim at three months old; talk, run and sing at a year old, and if a Samoan had a child that sucked a dummy (presumably a comforter) at six years old and wailed driving along in its pram at an advanced age, as the children of the wealthy class of England do, they would look upon it as a great curio and smother it for shame on the first starless night.

John Bull.

The nickname John Bull is said to have appeared first in a satire by Dr. John Arbuthnot called "Law Is a Bottomless Pit; or, the History of John Bull," published in 1721. Washington Irving mentions the typical figure as a "sturdy, corpulent, old fellow with a red waistcoat, leather breeches and short, oaken cudgel. Many Napoleonic caricatures show John Bull represented in this way.

Height of Annoyance.

"I'm mad at my wife. To anger her I shall flirt with some other woman." "If you want to make her absolutely furious ask some other woman to sew on a button for you."—Kansas City Journal.

Audience.
Neilson to Sunday.
Twenty Years "On the Stage" the John H. Barnes, an old time star, this to say of Adelaide Neilson, the once famous star:

"One quite extraordinary gift she had—namely, that of tears. At any given moment or cue she could make the tears mount to her eyes and even run down her cheeks irrespective of anything she was feeling at the time. It almost resembled the turning on of a tap. Undoubtedly she had great beauty—wonderful eyes and an expressive mouth, due coloring of complexion and hair and a rather spare figure.

"Her appearance suggested a woman of Spanish or Italian type. As a matter of fact she was born of humble parents in a village in Yorkshire in 1848, and her real name was Elizabeth Ann Brown. In her youth she was by turns a mill hand at Gaisley (York), a nursemaid and a barmaid, so the strenuous life she must have led to raise herself to the position she eventually attained may be imagined."

An example of the temper that sometimes flared from behind the Neilson beauty is included in this passage:

"A curious incident occurred in Baltimore. The play was 'As You Like It.' Milnes Levick played Jacques and had spoken the 'Seven Ages' speech very finely, gaining tremendous applause at the end. Miss Neilson (as far as I know without intent) said, 'Go on, go on,' and the scene was taken up before the applause died down.

"The audience got annoyed and seemed to feel that it was being treated scurvily and kept up the applause in a manner which stopped the play. Miss Neilson ordered the curtain to be rung down, and then the storm burst out. It became a battle royal between her and the audience, who simply declined to listen to a word until Mr. Levick had repeated the speech. A silly scene, which might have been avoided, but became an absolute deadlock, out of which there was only one way. The audience was master of the situation."

Rules of the Game.

Industrial success is personal, not social. Society is not holding a man down; the existing social system is not keeping men at the bottom; it is their own personal deficiencies that keep them there. Industrial success can be won at a price, and the price is observance of the inevitable rules of the game—namely, sobriety, industry, saving, avoidance of speculation, knowledge of human nature, good judgment, common sense, persistence, intelligence and integrity. No social system ever keeps a man down who has these qualities. Is it not the best thing for the world to find out that industrial success can be won only by the display of these qualities?—J. Laurence Laughlin in Atlantic Monthly.

Channel Island Currencies.

The currency system of the channel islands is complex. Both Jersey and Guernsey have a coinage of their own and in addition permit the free circulation of the coins of England and France. Guernsey's coins of copper, which include a half farthing, do not go higher in value than a penny, but pound notes are also issued. And if you take in Guernsey on the way back from a holiday in France you can have a mathematical morning calculating how to pay your bill, stated in English, in the coins of France and Guernsey, for which you will have no use in England.—London Spectator.

Tripoli's Scottish Admiral.

Tripoli has long had a bad reputation, but reached the zenith of offensiveness a century ago, when its private fleet was organized by a renegade Scotchman, Peter Lyster. Deserting the English ship on which he was mate, Lyster turned Moslem, married a near relation to the reigning pasha and soon rose to the position of lord high admiral of the fleet. He did a deal of mischief, but came to a bad end.—London Standard.

A Turkish Custom.

Upon the graves of the dead in the Turkish cemeteries little vessels of water are placed for the benefit of the birds, and some of the marble tombs have basins chiseled out for the same purpose, the superstition being that birds carry messages about the living to the dead and, like everything else in Turkey, are suspected of being spiteful unless something is done to curry their favor.

He Had Labored.

"I dare say you haven't worked in years," remarked the hard featured housewife. "You do me a great injustice, mum," said the tattered tourist. "I'm recuperating" right now from a sentence of six months at hard labor.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

In the Dumps.

There was once upon a time an Egyptian king, so it is said, who built a pyramid and died of melancholy. His name was Dumops. The memory of his tragic history is perpetuated every time we say we are "in the dumps."

They Remind One Very Much of the Snakes in Ireland.

BECAUSE THERE ARE NONE.

What Apologies There Are For Them Are a Great Deal Like the Bed of a Stone Quarry—The Torture That Goes With a Trip in a Peking Cart.

Describing the roads, or, rather, the lack of roads, in China and the torture that is undergone by the tourist who, used to the luxurious modes of travel we may employ, trusts himself to the uncertain joys of a trip in a Peking chair, a writer in the Wide World Magazine says:

"Now, a Peking cart is a very venerable mode of progression. When our ancestors were lightly dressed in woad and had no conception of any wheeled vehicle the Chinese lady was paying her calls in the back of a Peking cart, the seat of honor under the tilt, well out of sight of the passers by, while her servant sat in front, the place of comfort, if such a word can be applied to anything pertaining to a Peking cart.

"In spite of its long and aristocratic record if there is any mode of progression more wearying and uncomfortable I have not met it. It is simply a springless board set on a couple of wheels with a wagon tilt of blue cotton over it and a place for heavy luggage behind. The Chinaman sits on the floor and does not seem to mind, but the ordinary westerner, like myself, packs his bedding and all the cushions he can beg or borrow around him and then resigns himself to his fate.

"The Peking cart has one advantage, people will tell you—it has nothing to break in it. But there are moments when it would be a mighty relief if something did break, for if the wood-work holds together as it tosses you from side to side you yourself are one sore, bruised mass. No; I cannot recommend a Peking cart, even on the smoothest road.

"And the roads in China are not smooth. We all know the description of the snakes in Ireland. 'There are none,' and much the same might be said about the roads in China. There are so called roads, certainly, upon which the people move about, but I have seldom met one that was any better than the surrounding country, and very, very often on this journey I met roads where it was ease and luxury to move off them on to the neighboring plowed field.

"The recipe for a road there in the north seems to be: Take a piece of the country that is really too bad to plow or to use for any agricultural purpose whatever, that a mountain torrent, in fact, has given up as too much for the water, upset a stone wall over it—a stone wall with good, large stones in it—take care they never for a moment lie evenly, and you have your road.

"Leaving Peking for the eastern tombs, you go for the first two or three hours along a paved way of magnificent proportions planned and laid out as a highway should be. The great stones with which it is paved were probably put there by slave labor, how many hundred years ago I do not know, but the blocks are uneven now, some of them are gone altogether, though how a huge block of stone could possibly disappear passes my understanding, and whenever the carter could he took the cart down beside the road, where at least the dust made a cushion for the nail studded wheels, and the jarring and the jolting were not quite so terrible.

"It takes as long to get beyond the environs of Peking in a cart as it does to get out of London in a motorcar. First we passed through the Babylonish gate, and the great walls were behind us; then, outside the city, all looking dusty, dirty and khaki colored in the brilliant sunshine, were numerous small houses, and the wayside was lined with booths on which were things for sale.

"Along the roadway came an endless array of people, clad for the most part in blue cotton—men walking, men with loads slung from a bamboo across their shoulders, donkeys laden with baskets or sacks of grain, with fat Chinese on their backs. There were Peking carts, there were mules, there were ponies, and this busy throng is almost the same as it was a couple of thousand years ago.

"But it was a long, long while before I could feel I was really in the country. There was the khaki colored land, there were the khaki colored houses, built of mud apparently, with graceful tiled roofs, and blue clad people everywhere and everywhere at work.

"Always the fields were most beautifully tilled. There were no fences. The Chinese are too civilized to need fences, and when you see stone walls it is only because, since they can't be dropped off the planet into space, the stones must be disposed of somehow."

Paris For Politeness.

Translated rather crudely and literally, this is the notice in a Paris trolley car: "Messieurs the passengers are urged (literally "prayed"), before renouncing the shelter which the carriage they are about to quit offers them, to assure themselves, as a preliminary, that no carriage coming in the opposite direction is in proximity."

Hope for the best, but work hard for the result.

my and Saving.
A paradox is the fact that those people who make no effort to dollar when times are highly prosperous will develop and practice economy when work and opportunity are less plentiful. The best way, of course, is to try and save at least a little all the time, putting by a larger amount when earnings are at their height. As a nation we are not taught that economy, which makes France the banker of the world and whose accumulations come not from vast exports of natural resources, but from the combined small savings, consistently continued year after year, by the French people as a whole.

The French save partly because it has become hereditary and chiefly because the children are brought up that way and are taught the dignity of accumulation. We, on the contrary, in a spirit of false pride, are inclined to scorn the necessity of saving, as though it were something of which to be ashamed. If our present experiences shall teach us thrift it will be a strengthening of a great national weakness.—H. H. Windsor in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

NOTICE

To Delinquent Taxpayers.

Having been appointed Collector of Taxes, I find upon making an examination of the City Records many people who have for some unknown reason failed to pay their taxes, which in many cases include Real Estate Tax, Water Tax, Personal Tax and Assessments for improvements that have long since been completed.

It is the desire and intention of the present City authorities to collect all taxes not only for the current year, but especially taxes that are in arrears, without using any harsh or arbitrary means of collecting same, if possible.

If you are indebted to the City of South Amboy for taxes of any kind, this notice applies directly to you, and in order to avoid unnecessary publicity and expense, call at the Collector's Office at once and arrange to liquidate your debt.

On or about November 15th the list of delinquents for the year 1914 will be published according to law and be followed by the regular sale in December.

As out of town Companies are authorized by law to deal in delinquent tax liens it behooves those in arrears to keep out of their clutches, as they usually charge exorbitant fees to redeem.

This is Royal Reception Week—Dress up and Advertise "Good Times"

This is the opening day of Royal Reception Week at this store. And we consider it a day of patriotic significance to every American in South Amboy.

The Royal Tailors have set aside this week as a mobilization call to the good dressers of America to come and see the new styles and fabrics for Fall and Winter.

It's your plain duty this Fall to wear a Prosperity Uniform. And now is the time to view the new fashions and get on speaking terms with the season's latest woolen novelties.

In 10,000 cities and towns, Royal Reception Week is being observed this week. And in every Royal dealer's store the spirit is the same.

It is the spirit of cordiality and friendly welcome to everybody.

Royal Reception Week is probably the most unique clothes event in America, in that no man is urged to buy. This is not a selling week—it is a showing week—a display and demonstration week—a handshaking week.

To mark the occasion, and make it a little more interesting for those who do order their suits during the Reception Week, we will make them a

J. ALFRED JOHNSON
"THE REGAL STORE"

178 Broadway :: South Amboy

(By F. R. Stevens, Agriculturist,
Lehigh Valley Railroad.)

Except in the sections which have light sands, I have noticed each year more and more fall plowing of the ground. This is undoubtedly good practice. Authorities agree perfectly in this matter and practice also approves the plan. The New England Primer, printed in 1797, says "The last of summer or the beginning of autumn is the right season for plowing new ground. The first plowing should be performed so long before-hand that the turfs may ferment and become partly rotten. This is not to be expected if the ground is plowed late in the fall."

Later authorities, such as King in 1895, Fletcher in 1907, and Lyon & Pippin in 1911, all confirm the practice of fall plowing. Carefully worked-out experiments show that plowing at this time of the year gives the frosts a chance to work into the heavy soil, breaking up clods, forming a mulch and leaving a condition that favors the retention of moisture during the following year. Not only this advantage is gained but the time in the spring when the work is rushing is of great importance.

This year we have a superabundance of moisture which will make ideal conditions for late fall plowing. In addition to this, the second growth of the meadows has been unusually great, giving a large amount of vegetable matter to plow into the soil. This gives us an opportunity to carry out the plans we have had for so long in plowing deeper. I think that every farmer, especially with heavy soil, has well-formed resolutions to plow deeper each year, but the amount of vegetable matter at hand to be turned under to incorporate with the subsoil turned up has kept him from deepening the furrow.

To quote again from the Old New England Primer, "Our farmers are sometimes led to plow too shallow to save a little labor. And some are too much afraid to turn up what they call 'dead earth.' But they should know that all the soil above the hardpan may be well employed in tillage for some crops or other; and that if they turn up a red soil, it will in a year or two become dark, and fit to nourish plants by being exposed to the sun and the weather."

More recent authorities again confirm the doctrine of the New England Primer and I believe that it is good agricultural practice to plow at least two inches deeper this fall than the field was ever plowed before, leaving the subsoil to the action of the winter and disking it heavily to mix with the humus early in the spring. Realizing the importance of this factor in agricultural practice, so called deep plowing machines are being placed upon the market, but in the average field to-day the plow used will plow much deeper than the fields have been accustomed to and this year with its excessive moisture is a good year to begin this practice.

GRAND STAND SEAT SALE SEPT. 14.

Orders for grand stand and clubhouse reserved seat tickets for the Trenton Fair should not be mailed before Sept. 13.

Envelopes which bear a postoffice cancellation mark prior to Sept. 13 will not be opened until attention has been given those received Sept. 14.

Requests for reservations must be sent to H. E. Lattin, agent, box 105, Trenton, N. J., and must be accompanied by a self-addressed stamped envelope and cash, certified check, postal or express money order, payable to the Interstate Fair Association. Not more than six tickets will be sold with any one order, as the management is endeavoring to protect its patrons from ticket scalpers.

The prices for the tickets Monday, Tuesday and Friday, Sept. 27, 28 and Oct. 1, are as follows: Clubhouse, $1; grand stand, 50 cents.

Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 29, 30: Grand stand, $1; clubhouse, $2.

As a Child She Was Condemned to the Guillotine During the Reign of Terror

By JOHN L. TREVOR

During the French revolution among those who believed in securing certain reforms from the king was Edmond de Bouvier, a younger son of Count de Bouvier. He was enthusiastic for the cause until it passed into the hands of those who were infuriated, like wild animals, by the taste of blood; then he wished to withdraw. He was thinking of leaving France when he received the appointment of judge, before whom persons who were to be got rid of would be brought for condemnation.

De Bouvier was horrified, suspecting that the appointment had been given him with a view to sending him to the guillotine on a charge of sympathizing with the royalists. He would receive from Robespierre, who was then in control, a list of those who were to be condemned, and when they were brought before him it would be expected that he would do the bidding of his superior. If he refused he would be sent to execution himself. Nor would his refusal save those whom he was expected to condemn.

De Bouvier was young and wished to live. Indeed, he hoped, if his life was spared (all this fame of vengeance had burned itself out, to be of service to his country. Summoning his resolution, he went to the courtroom the morning after his appointment, and, by doing what another would do if he did not, won the confidence of those in power, while at the same time he was on the watch for an opportunity to get out of France.

He had condemned most of those who were brought before him, standing up under the ordeal by summoning all his fortitude when a child, a girl, was brought before him. The judge flinched. Calling to him one who had charge of the prisoners, he asked him why one so young had been brought before him for condemnation. He was

THE EXECUTIONER LOOKED AT THE PAPER, told that she was Louise de Chapporal, the last of the family of the Counts de Chapporal, and it was to the interest of the revolution that the family be eradicated.

"But who ordered her to be brought here?"

"Citizen Robespierre."

"Is he willing to stand for the execution of a child?"

"No, M. le Juge. As soon as she has been dispatched it will be announced that a mistake has been made."

For a moment De Bouvier meditated whether to step down from his chair and surrender himself to be dealt with as an enemy to the revolution. But an idea struck him—not that there was much expectation of carrying it out without his own condemnation, but there was a faint hope. At any rate, there was hope for the child.

"How old are you, little girl?" he asked, with a pity in his voice he could not control.

"Seven," replied the child, with a smile.

"Have you a papa and a mamma?"

"Yes, but they have taken them away."

The judge hit his lip to retain his equanimity. He knew that they had taken her parents to the guillotine.

"That will do," he said to the man in charge of her. And she was led away among those who were to be executed.

These prisoners were to go to the guillotine the next day. That evening De Bouvier went to a clothing shop and bought a pair of loose trousers, a blouse and a red silk handkerchief. Then he bought a suit of boy's clothes. Taking these with him, he went to a baker's and purchased a dozen loaves of bread and one of those wooden vessels in which bread is carried by bakers in Paris. These articles he deposited in a room he had hired.

In the morning, putting a razor in his pocket, he sallied in rection of the courtroom. As expected to send more to their long home. But turning a street that led to the Place de la Revolution he went toward the guillotine. A rumble passed him, loaded with persons going to execution, and among them he saw the condemned child. She, too, saw him, smiled and waved her hand. He hurried on. When he reached the guillotine the victims were being unloaded. Stepping up to the executioner, he took from his pocket the parchment appointing him a judge and showed it to him.

"I condemned these prisoners yesterday," he said, "and I made a mistake. This child is not to be executed."

The executioner looked at the paper and said nothing. It was none of his business, who was to be executed. De Bouvier then spoke to the officer in charge of the troops surrounding the guillotine, but did not show the evidence of his authority, for he was known to the officer.

"This child got on the list by mistake."

"Yes, M. le Juge."

"I am going to take her away."

The officer hesitated, then said that he supposed it would be all right, only he would expect the judge to take the responsibility in the case. This De Bouvier then spoke to the officer in child by the hand, led her away.

He did not hurry till he entered a narrow street leading from the Champs Elysees, then walked as rapidly as the child was able. Taking her to the room he had hired, he shaved off his beard, then put on the baker's costume, tied the handkerchief about his neck, dressed the little girl in boy's clothes and cut off her long hair. Then, putting the receptacle filled with the bread on his head and taking the child by the hand, he went downstairs and out on to the street.

Meanwhile, a new batch of prisoners were brought to the courtroom to be condemned by Judge de Bouvier. The judge did not appear, but those in charge of the prisoners, thinking that he had been belated, waited for him. When an hour had passed without his coming, a messenger was sent to his lodging. He was not there. An announcement of the fact that the judge was not at court and could not be found was made to Robespierre. At once notification was given to all in sympathy with the revolution to look out for the missing judge and arrest him if found. An hour later word reached Robespierre that the missing judge had taken away Louise de Chapporal from the guillotine. The manager of the revolution was now certain that De Bouvier had disobeyed his order and had taken to flight. But he must pass the city barricades, and orders were given to the gatekeepers to look out for a man and a little girl.

De Bouvier's object was to head for the coast and escape to England.

When he reached the barricade, the soldier of the gate was about to pass him when a man darted up on horseback with Robespierre's order. The fugitive was refused a passage till he could be investigated.

"Investigated!" cried De Bouvier. "I have no time. I must carry this bread to my customers living outside the barricade."

"But I am ordered to stop Judge de Bouvier," replied the sentinel, "and a little girl."

De Bouvier laughed. "Do I look like a judge? And you are told to stop a girl, not a boy."

The sentry called a sergeant, who looked at the two wayfarers and consulted the order. For a moment the man and the child were between life and death. Fate threw the die, and life won.

"Go on," said the sergeant. "There's no need to keep persons from their bread."

The barricade once passed, De Bouvier found himself on the road leading toward Calais. But he had not gone far before he took to the woods for the day, and on reaching another road he changed his direction, resolving to head for the Belgian frontier. He peddled bread along his route, and when he had sold one lot he bought another. Couriers were sent out notifying the revolutionists on this route, the one usually taken by emigres, to stop any young man with or without a little girl who answered the description of the missing judge. De Bouvier's two precautions threw those who were looking for him off his track. They did not know he was disguised as a baker nor that the child with him was a girl. Besides, the fugitives appeared to be commoners and not aristocrats, as was given out.

After several narrow escapes De Bouvier, with his charge, crossed the border into a country where he was safe. He went to Belgium, where he turned Louise over to some emigre ladies, who on hearing her sad story agreed to care for her. Then he went to sleep, happy that if he had been obliged to condemn certain persons to death he had been able to save a child and had escaped with his own life.

When Napoleon was made First Consul De Bouvier returned to Paris. He entered the army and became a colonel. Louise de Chapporal did not return to France till the restoration of the Bourbons after the final fall of Napoleon. She was then a woman and began to hunt for the man who had saved her from the guillotine. Through those to whom he had committed her in Belgium she learned his name and sent him word that a lady wished him to call upon her. He did so and was informed that she was Louise de Chapporal.

Mademoiselle or, rather, the Countess de Chapporal regained her estates through the king and was very rich. She gave herself and her fortune to the man who had during those frightful days risked his own life to save hers.

The Trysting Place

A Story of a Mexican Oil Well

By MAY C. ETHEREDGE

Manuel Perez was a Mexican peon. One day Manuel went to Jose Gonzales, who owned a hacienda on which he grew coffee, and asked for the loan of $30. Gonzales understood this request, for it is the common method in Mexico of taking on the yoke of slavery. He lent the young man the money, and Manuel signed a contract to work for him till it was returned.

Now, there was a special reason for Manuel thus entering Gonzales' service. The hacienda had a pretty daughter, Maria, sixteen years old, whom Manuel had met, and the two being of the mating age had fallen in love with each other. Manuel was an intelligent fellow, and instead of spending the most of what he earned for pulque, as many peons do, he saved it and had $100, which for safety he put in a bank. By working for Gonzales he would have many opportunities of meeting Maria. If his passion for her were discovered by her father, who was a very stingy man, he would not be likely to send Manuel away without his repaying the $30 loaned, and peons are not expected to have the money to return.

Maria was fond of horseback riding and went about over the hacienda on a pony. In her equestrian costume of short jacket bordered with gold lace and skirt covered with glittering ornaments she was very captivating. Many a young man of her own class would have been glad to marry her, but she had fallen in love with Manuel and would listen to none of them.

The lovers contrived to see each other occasionally, though it was difficult for Manuel to escape the notice of the overseer. Manuel, having an appointment with his sweetheart, would disappear and when he returned to work would be punished. But he could endure the punishment since he had received his reward in a meeting with Maria.

These absences were at last reported by the overseer to the hacendado, and he gave orders that the next time found an avenue under the trees, and by following its bed he came out some distance from where he had started. He was in agony lest Maria had been watched and captured entering the trysting place. But, seeing her on her pony riding about as though nothing disturbed her, he took courage.

Manuel went back to work and, after being cross examined as to where he had been, took his punishment, and though it was more severe than usual, he bore it without flinching, sustained, as he was, by his secret.

Fortunately for the lovers, their love was not known, and they could communicate, though, of course, always at a great risk. Manuel contrived to let Maria know that they must not try to meet again for some time. Meanwhile he determined not to go to the trysting place again in the day. But one night when all were asleep, armed with a spade, a lantern and some matches, he stole out of the peon quarters to revisit his find. Had he not gone there often he would not have been able to find the entrance, for he dared not light his lantern until well screened by the thickets.

On reaching the trysting place he struck a match and, having found the hole he had dug with his knife, began to throw out the earth with his spade. He had gone down but a few feet when there stood on the bottom of the hole he had dug several inches of a fluid. Lighting his lantern, he saw that the oil was slowly rising. Dipping a dry twig into it, he held it over the flame in the lantern, and it burned brightly.

This was enough. He refilled the hole and smoothed the ground above it, then went back to his quarters.

The next day Manuel went to Gonzales and offered him the $30 he had borrowed, with interest. The hacendado accepted it, and Manuel went forth a free man. Before leaving the hacienda he made an appointment to meet Maria clandestinely, and when they came together he told her that there was a fortune at their trysting place. The location was wild land outside Gonzales' hacienda. Nevertheless Manuel had but $70, and this was too little to tempt the owner to sell any of his property. Maria was accorded liberal pin money by her father and could produce $100. But she owned a jewel which would bring a hundred more. In all the two raised $300. Then Manuel found the owner of the land, and, representing that he wished to erect a sawmill beside the stream, which could be used for power, he succeeded in buying twenty acres of ground at $10 an acre.

As soon as the deed had passed to him Manuel threw up his hat joyfully. He had $100 left with which to develop his oil well. He dug with his spade a sluiceway by which he turned a part of the stream into a new channel that ran within a few yards of his well. Then he made a mill-wheel and bought a pump with gearing. Lastly, he dug his oil well to a depth of ten feet, at the bottom of which stood several feet of oil.

When Manuel set his machinery to work to pump out the oil he was anxious as to the flow continuing. He pumped for some time, looking into the well and was delighted to see that the flow continued as fast as he pumped. Then he knelt and thanked his patron saint for the blessing that had been bestowed upon him.

Manuel said nothing to any one about his oil property. He bought a few empty barrels and filled them with oil. With his ax he cleared a way so that a team could haul them away and with the money he got for the oil bought more barrels and very soon had money enough to build a shed over his machinery.

One day Gonzales, who was riding over his hacienda, saw a well dressed man, also mounted, coming toward him. When the stranger neared him Gonzales recognized his former peon, Manuel Perez.

"What are you doing here, and in those clothes?" asked the hacendado.

"I came to ask the hand of your daughter."

"My daughter?"

"Yes, señor. I have good blood in my veins, and I am rich."

"Rich? In what does your fortune consist—assurance?"

"If you will come with me I will show it to you."

Moved by curiosity, Gonzales rode with his former slave to the oil well. When he saw the crude machinery and, Manuel having turned on the power, a barrel of oil filled in a few minutes, he was astonished. He did not give Manuel his daughter, but he promised for oil not only on his hacienda, but on contiguous property.

No other outlet for the petroleum was found, and the failure greatly enhanced the value of Manuel Perez's property. Americans, Englishmen, everybody, came to see the well, and large sums were offered the owner for his property. He would not sell, and with his profits he developed his means for getting out the oil, and since it continued to flow as fast as he took it out he soon had an enormous income.

When Gonzales had tested all his own and adjacent property without finding oil Manuel went to him again to ask for Maria, and this time the hacendado succumbed. The wedding festivities took place at the bride's home, but when they were over her husband took her to a handsome place of his own. He has never sold a foot of the ground he purchased for a song and has refused every offer for the whole property. Whenever he needs money he sets his machinery going and in a few hours has a hundred barrels.

YOUR CAR KNOWS THE DIFFERENCE

FILL your tank with Standard Motor Gasoline, and you notice the difference instantly in the "feel" of your engine.

Standard Motor Gasoline is so much better than "just gas" that it is worth while to be particular about what goes into your tank. Cylinder carbon frequently is caused by the use of an inferior fuel.

Standard Motor Gasoline vaporizes readily and burns cleanly. It is a straight-distilled product, not a mixture—the same for every drop in your tank.

You can get Standard Motor Gasoline wherever you can take a car. It is absolutely uniform—the same now as next week, and it is cheaper to buy because there are more miles in a gallon.

Use Polarine Oil, the Standard Oil for all motors. Friction free, carbon free. For sale wherever you see the "Standard Motor Gasoline Service Station" sign.

HE SAW THE OIL WAS SLOWLY RISING.

Manuel quit work without leave he be shadowed. One afternoon when Manuel was missing a message was sent to Gonzales apprising him of the fact, and he sent out persons in every direction to look for him.

Manuel had gone to meet his sweetheart at a spot near which a little stream boiled and bubbled down a declivity to a river below. The place of meeting was about a hundred yards from the stream and surrounded by thick tropical foliage. The location, including the stream, was difficult to penetrate for any one who did not know of an opening in the thicket which Manuel had made and concealed.

Manuel, having quit work, darted into some bushes and crawled into a wood, through which he made his way to the trysting place. There he threw himself on the ground to wait for Maria, who was to come from a different direction. But Maria did not come. She had seen the persons sent out to learn where Manuel had gone and prudently remained away.

Manuel, lying flat on the ground, smelled petroleum. It did not seem to him that the oil could have been spilled in such a wild place, and it occurred to him that perhaps he was on oil. Taking out his knife, he dug a hole in the ground. The deeper he dug the stronger the smell, and at the bottom of the hole there was a thin layer of oil.

He arose and stood on his feet. He saw the hole a lifelong

REPORT OF PROGRESS OF COUNTY FARM DEMONSTRATION

June 30th completed the first three months of farm demonstration in Middlesex County and the Farm Demonstrator, Mr. Irving L. Owen, submits the following report, showing in a small way the amount of work that has been accomplished up to date:

Mileage by Auto.....	2,307
Mileage by Rail.....	67
Visits made to farmers.....	247
Letters written.....	337
Phone calls at office.....	35
Phone calls.....

outlined and will be carried on as definite projects, some of them to extend over several years. The raising of alfalfa is one project that will command considerable attention. Arrangements have been made for ten demonstration plots of one square rod each on which alfalfa will be sown during August. There will be many farmers who will sow from one to several acres so that next season the acreage in alfalfa will be very much greater than this season.

There are several plots that have been planted to cow peas and soy beans to be turned under as green manures. The green manure projects should be especially valuable in the sections where the lighter soils predominate, being either sandy or gravelly in nature.

One small apple orchard is being run as a demonstration orchard and arrangements are being made to have at least six or eight under demonstration next year.

It is hoped that sufficient interest will be shown among the dairymen of the County so that it will be possible to form a milk testing association in the near future.

Several other lines of work are under consideration for further study and instituting of regular projects, while a great number of questions of all sorts are brought up and handled daily as the Demonstrator calls from farm to farm.

Co-operating with the Middlesex County Board of Agriculture a corn growing contest is being carried on which should produce results of great value to the corn growers of the County. In addition to this there are two corn tests being carried out this season in comparing seed corn from a large number of farms; one in the northern part of the county and one in the southern part. The plan of this demonstration is to secure seed from as many farmers as possible and plant it side by side on one farm in each section. Mr. John Evans at New Market is growing 19 samples collected in Placataway township and Mr. Isaac Barlow of Monmouth Junction is growing 17 samples collected in South Brunswick and Cranbury townships. At harvesting time meetings will be held at these places and the results of the study of the yield will be different.

Let all help. Remember Old Home Celebration is near at hand. To make it a success, the committee must have money, and that at once. Every resident of the city should be interested in making this the banner celebration, and it will be if all contribute a little cash to help stir up the old town as never before. Look at the fun you'll have! Rush along that time or more if you feel so disposed.

The resolutions passed by the Common Council requesting the Board of Freeholders to assume control of the former county roads through this city were timely and in order. Other cities in the county have made similar requests and the Board of Freeholders has accepted them, thus saving considerable expense to the taxpayers of such city. Of course, maps showing the streets and widths have to accompany the request. We hope that these will be prepared so as to be submitted at the regular meeting of the board next month.

The Raritan River Railroad is a small road, but when it comes to doing things it is more liberal than the big roads. They of their own request built two substantial bridges at Main and Raritan streets over their tracks, and now an excellent bridge has been completed at Washington avenue. These structures are built substantial and will do service for years to come.

MEMBERS SAD WHILE PRESIDENT ENJOYED HIS VACATION.

The club that has no name, but which holds its meetings nightly on Stevens avenue, was without a presiding officer last week on account of the absence of the president, Jimmy. For a long time now, it seems that the aforesaid president had been contemplating a vacation trip. Last year he almost went away but the sudden and unexpected ownership of a motorcycle, which was literally thrust upon him disorganized his plans and prevented the trip.

This time, though, the widely advertised attractions of the Hudson River proved too strong for unexpected happenings in the course of human events and as a result Jimmy deserted his faithful friends who were always willing to listen to the merits of, and to hear about, the latest exploits of the pony, to follow the beckoning finger of promised adventure. The club missed him very much and the ordinary spirited discussion of every day happenings was carried on in whisperings almost, and with abated breath. Every fresh newspaper was quickly seized and eagerly examined to see if it perchance contained any account of the travels of the leader.

No, he didn't take the pony with him. He left the faithful and wonderful animal at home and 'tis said that even the pony was moping around, seeming to know and realize that he had been supplanted in his master's attentions by a romantic river.

Mr. Donlin, who is chairman of the picnic committee, reported progress and that he had written requesting the use of the Yacht Club grounds for the holding of the picnics. No reply had as yet reached him as to the receipt of his letter.

The athletic committee chairman reported slow progress. Said it was terribly hard to get his committee together this year.

Mr. Roddy told the meeting that the headquarters offices were open every night and part of the day time, although there was not so much surety about the earlier hours of the day. He asked that the chairman desirous of calling a meeting for a special date come in early and give his committee ample opportunity to get the notices out so that the notices could be gotten into the mails in sufficient time to insure their delivery before the time of the meeting. He also said that anything urgent in the correspondence line could be handled by either him or the secretaries, all of whom could be reached by telephone in an emergency.

A report from the baby parade committee showed that their progress was held back somewhat on account of no definite appropriation having been made to cover their activities. Thus they did not want to plan too far ahead. All the preliminary work had been taken care of, however, and it has been decided to discontinue the practice of making a house to house canvass for entries on account of the likelihood of someone being missed. The report also stated that entry blanks were now available and could be secured from the office of the librarian in the Public Library any time. Entries could also be filed with the librarian or at headquarters any evening.

A contribution from the Crossman Company of five dollars was presented to the committee through Mr. George Green, the Broadway merchant. A communication explaining the contribution being made through Mr. Green was read by the secretary and upon motion received and filed and the secretary instructed to acknowledge receipt of same with thanks.

A suggestion regarding printed or engraved invitations to former residents and friends of present residents was referred to the executive committee for action with power. It was explained that lists of former residents and friends were being handed in by local people and that although the publicity committee were only too willing to write to these people and extend them an invitation they found that writing a letter to each one was loading the machine and operators beyond their capacity. In this connection the secretary read a card which had been received by him in response to the invitation sent out by him to the writer, one Joseph J. Mullanaphy. The writer said that the mail bag containing the invitation had been thrown off of one train and run over by another. He saw it and in gathering up the bits left came across the one addressed to himself. It was not all there but from what he could decipher of it was an invitation to be in South Amboy on Old Home Day. He said that unless unforeseen circumstances interfered he and his four children would be here to swell the crowds on that day.

Miss Fulton, who is in charge of the preparation of the chorus, which is to be one of the big features of the Friday night carnival, was present and stated what progress had been made. It seems that she had sent out over two hundred invitations to singers in this city, asking their assistance and requesting a preliminary meeting at the City Hall on Wednesday evening for initial service. She stated that an orchestra would be an absolute necessity on account of the singing being out of doors, which she assured the committee was a very different matter from singing within a building. She had procured a pianist and would need about five additional pieces. The program so far decided upon was an opening song of greeting to the queen, one to the people present, one to old acquaintances and friends, "The Star Spangled Banner." Suggestions for further elaborations would be gratefully received. The speaker had already made one trip to New York in search of music and had ascertained that the music for two hundred voices, which was what she expected to have in the chorus would cost out sixty-two dollars. On account of the chorus herself she would be at per ce tive committee on Wednesday evening.

MATTERS GETTING IN SHAPE FOR A REAL BIG TIME

The Chorus

The initial meeting of the chorus which Miss Bertha S. Fulton is preparing was held in the City Hall Wednesday evening. Out of over two hundred invitations to various singers in the city to attend the meeting eighty-five attended and gave in their names as willing to be members of the chorus. Many others were probably prevented from attending and will doubtless join in at a subsequent meeting.

Plans were discussed somewhat and it was decided that on Wednesday nights the tenor and bass voices were to meet for a strenuous practice period lasting three-quarters of an hour to an hour. On Thursday nights the soprano and alto voices would have their period of hard work and then on Saturday nights the entire chorus is to practice together. The meetings will be held in the City Hall and will start at 7.45. Not more than three-quarters of an hour will be devoted to the practice work.

Details for the work of the chorus during the carnival festival which is destined to be one of the features of the Old Home Celebration have not been settled upon. The costuming of the various court attendants of the queen, coronation details, throne upon the viewing stand, etc. still remain to be thought out.

Executive Committee Meeting.

The executive committee held a meeting at headquarters on Wednesday evening and attempted to pare the budget down as much as possible. In spite of economy in every direction it was found that at least twenty-five hundred dollars would be necessary to carry out the plans that have already been gotten under way. The collectors are doing what they can in canvassing individuals and appeals are being sent out to all the organizations in the city. The first of the organizations to respond was the Moose Lodge, with a donation of ten dollars. Others will likely do likewise and some returns are expected from the picnics and from the voting contest. It will require extreme liberality on the part of citizens if the celebration is to be made a success.

Publicity Committee.

The Publicity boys still continue to get out volumes of correspondence of a wide and varied nature. Invitations to old residents and friends are being sent out from lists furnished by local citizens and the various organizations of the city are being requested to have a float or appear in a body in the big parade which will be held during the Friday night carnival. In response to their presentations as to the advertising that is to be gotten during the celebration many of the large manufacturing and other firms of the country are responding with prizes for the different events. These prizes are of all kinds from a package of chewing gum to a package of macaroni and from typewriter erasers and men's garters to automobile horns.

Benefit Performances.

The Publicity Committee has entered into a pact with the Empire Theatre management whereby the latter is to run off a benefit performance. There will be three nights when the management will take a back seat and let the Old Home crowd have the Theatre. The dates selected are August 2, 3 and 4. On these nights a bigger than a ten cent show will be prepared and an effort is being made to have some of the local talent perform vaudeville acts also.

On the nights in question the ticket-taking, ushering, etc., will be done by the committees interested. On the first night the Publicity Committee will be the ones in evidence. On Tuesday night the committee in charge of the Baby Parade will be "IT" and on Wednesday night the affair will be in the hands of the Carnival Chorus.

A large advance sale of tickets is being contemplated and in order to stimulate interest in the sale prizes are to be put up. Boys and girls are to be given an insight into this feature and to the youngster selling the most tickets a bicycle will be awarded. There will also be second and perhaps third prizes for the second and third highest sellers. The tickets will be good for any of the three nights. Further details will be available later.

General

All the preliminary work in connection with the baby parade has been completed and the committee is now in readiness to receive entries. Blanks are available and may be secured from the Publicity chase, some by donation and others by advertisers. Dandy prizes for the baby parade are beginning to come in from manufacturers and it is assured that this event will far surpass that of last year in every respect.

Plans are under way for the erection of a grand stand larger than that of last year. This will be necessary in order to accommodate the chorus and leave room for the queen's throne and her court in addition to seating for patrons.

About the Carnival.

The Carnival Committee is working energetically on their event. The parade is being worked up strongly and it is expected that the floats will be so numerous that restrictions may be necessary. Several startling features have been arranged for and it is a sure thing that the affair will be amusing to an extreme. All the organizations in the city are being requested to be in the parade in a body and not a few are already preparing to do so.

The carnival committee requests that entries be sent to the chairman, Mr. F. P. Coan. At a recent meeting it was decided to have a float division, a character division, a division for marching organizations and these have been arranged for.

It was also decided that all entries would be free and that they were to be open to everyone, whether resident or non-resident.

OLD HOME CELEBRATION NOTES.

Some difficulty is experienced by newcomers in handling the pens available at headquarters. Some practice generally suffices, however.

The thermometer is again being used to indicate the amount of contributions. It was put up at headquarters the fore part of the week.

A new sign now indicates to the seeker the location of headquarters. It hangs over the entrance of the building. The door to the upstairs office is nearly always open so that lettering thereon is unnecessary.

Perth Amboy youths are evidently anxious to get into the athletic contests on Old Home Day. The Athletic committee will decide whether to have the events open to all or restricted to residents only.

The Tabernacle in South River is now being advertised for sale to the highest bidder. The choir platform would be just the thing for the chorus now being formed by Miss Fulton and the Throne of the Queen.

The race for the queenship is a square one in every respect to being four candidates for the hon

Stories on the celebration will probably appear in the Newark Star to time shortly, if expecta ed with celebration posters shortly, a contract for that purpose having been given out.

No house to house canvass for entries in the Baby Parade will be made this year. It is extremely difficult to reach each and every mother and personally solicit her entry, hence the practice will be discontinued.

If the local Post Office follows the lead of some nearby towns and falls back in the amount of mail handled, it won't be any fault of the Publicity Committee. Seven machines are busy seven days a week working for Uncle Sam's enrichment.

Eighty-five singers signed up for the Carnival chorus at the initial meeting Wednesday evening.

Wednesday evening the tenor and base voices of the chorus meet for practice in the City Hall at a quarter to eight.

Thursday night at 7.45 the soprano and alto voices in the chorus meet for an hour's practice.

Saturday night the entire Carnival chorus meets for practice in the City Hall shortly before eight o'clock.

SPECIAL TRAIN SERVICE.

In addition to the regular trains the Raritan River Railroad, commencing July 19, will increase its service by running trains from this city at 7 a. m., 3 and 11 p. m. This is done to accommodate the many workmen at the new plants along the line of the road.

IN MEMORIAM.

APPLIGATE—In loving memory of our beloved daughter and sister, Carrie Appligate, who passed away on July 20, 1911.

Four long years we have sadly missed her; Loving hearts alone can tell. Not one day have we forgot her. Since she bade this world farewell. We think we see her loving smile. Although four years have passed, And in our memory fresh she lives And will until the last. You are not forgotten, Nor will you ever be, For so long as life and memory last We will always remember thee. The parents and sisters, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Johnson.

W. H. Hines Injured On Amboy Bridge

William H. Hines, representative in this city of the Perth Amboy Milk and Cream Company, met with a serious accident while on his way to Perth Amboy between one and two o'clock Wednesday morning.

He had with his horse and wagon reached a point near the draw on the Amboy bridge, when a large automobile owned by Theodore Achenberg, of Perth Amboy, crashed into the rear of his wagon, throwing Mr. Hines out, and he landed with great force on the roadway. Many empty bottles which he was returning were broken into fragments.

The automobile was not badly damaged, and the owner placed Mr. Hines therein and rushed with him to a physician's office, and afterwards took him to the Perth Amboy Hospital. No bones were found to be broken, but Mr. Hines was terribly bruised and suffered from shock.

About 9 o'clock O. W. Welsh with his automobile, accompanied by Mrs. Hines, went to the hospital and brought Mr. Hines to his home in this city.

Since coming home Mr. Hines has been confined to his bed and is under the care of a physician. It is feared he may be hurt internally, and if so he may be laid up a long time.

The milk wagon was badly damaged, but the horse escaped with slight bruises and cuts.

Delaney-O'Brien.

Lawyer John J. Delaney, of this city, and Miss Anna M. O'Brien, of Perth Amboy, were united in marriage last Wednesday morning. A large number of friends and relatives assembled in St. Mary's Church, Perth Amboy, to witness the nuptials. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Hugh Massy, of Phillipsburg, a cousin of the groom, assisted in the high nuptial mass by Rev. Fathers Cantwell and McKeever of Perth Amboy.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Catherine O'Brien, and Frank Delaney, a brother of the groom, was bestman.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Catherine O'Brien, in Water street, where hearty congratulations were extended and a wedding breakfast served.

Mr. and Mrs. Delaney will spend their honeymoon in New England.

Mr. Delaney is a member of the Middlesex bar and he has been practicing in Perth Amboy for several years. His bride has been for some time clerk to the Board of Tax Assessors of that city.

CONSTABLES CREATE SOME EXCITEMENT AT KEANSBURG

Constables Frank Niblett of Keansburg and Charles Salmons of Keyport served an execution on Rubin Brothers, druggists at New Point Comfort Beach, Wednesday night.

Considerable excitement ensued and a crowd of nearly 200 people blocked traffic at Carr avenue and New Point Comfort beachway when the officers were seen arguing with the proprietor. The climax came when a customer entered the store and on paying for his purchase gave the clerk a bill which compelled the change to be given from the cash register. Once the cash register was opened by the clerk, the officers attached the register and contents. During the mixup that followed it is claimed that the money was taken from the drawer and secreted on the person of the wife of the proprietor.

The officers returned to make the final levy. Finding the drawer empty of cash, they seized the register, and carried it from the store. It will be sold later at public auction to satisfy the claim.

SOUTH CROWD

WAS HOODOOED

Items continue to appear here and there in the county papers about the old Home Celebration in this city this year. Among others the following appeared on the suburban page of the New Brunswick Home News under the heading "Trip to South Amboy Carnival Was Hoodooed."

Jamesburg—August 13th, Friday, proved a jinx for four members of the Sunrise Club, of this place, when they started thirteen minutes after seven for South Amboy, just thirteen miles from a Hooker street garage. They had entered their club in the big parade and balked when placed thirteenth in line, after the big float owned by John A. Johnson was accidentally burned, thirteen minutes to nine.

At almost every town the jinx number appeared as an evil omen which took all the pleasure out of their trip until the finish of the parade, thirteen minutes after ten. All went well until one minute after twelve—again the 13—when the start was made for home. This is where the real trouble began.

All looked rosy for a happy return, after a disastrous trip, when bang went something, and after 23 minutes of investigation in trying to patch up the trouble, such a sorry-looking lot was the Sunshine Club as they started for home, afoot, just thirteen miles from home—and so thirsty, too. Several places they tried to quench their parched tongues, but at several farm houses they were routed out as tramps. Vain appeals for water only brought curses on their heads. Exactly thirteen minutes after one the march for home commenced.

Consternation was in store for several on their arrival home—thirteen minutes after five Saturday morning—just in time to feed the chickens and brighten up for their day's work. This was the anniversary of the outing made by this club to Cranbury, when the auto went wrong, with the same chauffeur, and they did not get home until after sunrise—hence the title of the club.

Those in the party were: Bruce Pullen, George Cole, Charles Whitlock, Fred L. Dey, Edward Dey.

A ROSE BY ANY OTHER NAME.

We learn from the news columns of an exchange that the Window Trimmers, or Dressers, are no longer to be known by that title. Hereafter they will, according to their own desires in the matter, be called Display Men. This is strictly in line with the march of progress in the matter of names. Time was when we had Drummers. This was in the distant past, and to-day we have only Traveling Men, in advanced communities.

Some few years ago Press Agents were quite generally known, but they have all died out or disappeared. To-day we have no Press Agents—except the itinerant ones—as the established Press Agents have developed into Publicity Representatives. There was a time when we referred to the gentlemen who prepare our relatives for our demise as Insurance Solicitors. Let no one use that term to-day. We now have Agents—Insurance Agents—or men who sell Insurance.

Many of our Tailors are now Clothiers. Gent's Furnishers to some extent are now known as Haberdashers. We know a lot of people who at one time were perfectly satisfied with the classification of Stenographer, who now are known only as Secretaries, Private and otherwise. Some of our most enlightened communities now refer to our old Gang Laborers as Construction Corps, and in one of our ultra fashionable cities the ubiquitous Garbage Collector is now a Deputy of the Sanitary Division of the Health Board.

Indeed, we know several perfectly good Newspaper Men who have graduated into the class of Journalists. And still march on. Janitors are rapidly becoming Building Superintendents and Scrub Women are now Janitresses. The Cook long since became the Chef and the Housekeeper would object to any other title than the Maid. Ward Healers are now Politicians and Politicians are Political Leaders. And so on. This is as it should be. The only one who remains just as he always was, and probably just as he always will be, is the fighting man. He is still a Sailor or a Soldier.—New Brunswick Home News.

Human Levers.

All man made machinery runs with wheels. Yet there is not a single wheel in the human body. And the human body is the most perfect piece of mechanism in the world. It seems strange that man has developed mechanics along all lines but those with which his own body works. Practically every motion we make is performed by the direct operation of levers, and living creatures are the only machines so built. Almost all these human levers are of one kind, that commonly called the third. There are three kinds of levers: (1) that in which the fulcrum is between the power and the weight, or resistance, as in a pair of scissors; (2) that in which the weight or resistance is between the fulcrum and the power, as in an oar; (3) that in which the power is between the fulcrum and the weight, as in a pair of grass clippers. It is true that each of these forms of levers is used in mechanics, but no great machine has ever been built on the purely lever principle.—New York World.

Japan's Hokey Pokey Men.

Japanese children are amused by the rice jelly molders, or amezakura, as American children are by the hokey pokey ice cream figurant. Beating a drum, he goes up and down city streets with a small box on his bamboo pole or on a small cart, paper flags of various colors decorating his outfit. Ame is a kind of jelly made from rice, of which all Japanese children are extremely fond. The ame seller stops when the children gather round him, and he amuses them by molding all kinds of shapes, from a fish to a bird, which he sticks on a piece of bamboo and sells to his audience for a mere nothing. He can blow up the ame like a glass blower, making a globe "or a large sized" animal or fish, as he wills, and each child chooses the object he most fancies. Each object created is painted with a vegetable coloring in lifelike colors, and with each purchase he gives away a paper flag. He is a picturesque feature at all temple festivals.—Bulletin of Japan Society.

Bagdad's Mysterious Scourge.

An uncanny, pernicious pest called the "date boil" sears the face of every human born in Bagdad. Children invariably have this dreadful sore on their faces. Throughout the middle east this mysterious scourge is known by various names—"Buton d'Alep," "Nile sore," "Delhi button," etc. Its cause and its cure are unknown. First a faint red spot appears, growing larger and running a course often eighteen months long.

White men from foreign lands have lived years in Arabia, only to have this boil appear upon their return to civilization, where its presence is embarrassing and hard to explain. Maybe it was "date boils" that Job had! Once a British consul at Aleppo lost almost his whole nose from one of these boils. Nearly every Bagdad native you meet has this "date mark" on his face.—National Geographic Magazine.

A Substitute For Spectacles.

At a meeting of the Academy of Medicine in Paris Dr. Lesage recommended a novel method for reading print for the use of those who happen to have forgotten their spectacles. The method is to take a piece of paper and perforate it with a pin, making numerous small holes. This paper must be held close to the eye and the reading matter at a distance from the eyes. A test of this method shows that it slightly enlarges the print to be read and that a book or newspaper can be held further away from the eyes than would ordinarily be possible to a near sighted man who had mislaid his glasses. However, the method is useless for prolonged reading, being valuable only when one must read a few paragraphs.

Neighborhood Melody.

"Please, ma'am," said the little girl from next door, "mother wants to know if you will lend her your new mechanical tune player this afternoon."

"What an extraordinary idea! Is she going to give a dance?"

Sugar Water.

Eau sucree is said to dispel thirst more efficiently than any other drink, and it is simplicity itself. Put three large lumps of sugar in a tumbler with a tablespoonful of water and allow the sugar to dissolve, then fill up with more cold water. The French say that the perfection of this drink consists in letting the sugar first melt slowly in a small quantity of water.

Longest Sentence.

"It says here that the longest sentence in the English language contains 140 words," observed the old fogey.

"That's wrong," replied the grouch. "The longest sentence contains only one word."

"What is that?" asked the old fogey.

"Life," replied the grouch.

Winter Care of the Skin.

Every girl can retain her soft, smooth skin through the entire winter by spending just a few extra minutes in preparing for it a guard against winter's winds.

The first rule, which each girl should remember, is never to dry her skin hastily after washing. This is the most important of all rules for winter, for more chapped skins are due to a slipshod drying than to any other cause.

Also the girl who is careful of her complexion should be quite sure that no soap remains on her skin. After washing with soap she should rinse all over with clear, fresh water. Then a brisk, thorough drying should take place with a coarse bath towel if possible. A dry, rough bath towel is far better for thorough drying than the ordinary face towel, which absorbs the water but does not take the moisture from the skin.

If the girl is going out immediately after washing a little pure olive oil should be rubbed into the face and a little camphor ice into the hands. The pure olive oil is far better than ordinary cold cream for keeping the skin smooth. It is not apt to grow a great deal of hair, as so many persons are inclined to think. Before going out into the wind a little of the oil should be well rubbed into the face and then dusted over with powder.

At night, after the face has been washed in warm water, the girl should rub in some good cold cream and then remove it with absorbent cotton. This will not only remove all the dirt of the day, but it will also leave the face soft and smooth for the night.

A point for the girl who is anxious to avoid a chapped face is to taboo veils, unless they are of white mesh. If they are closely woven the moisture from the breath will cling, wetting the veil, which in turn will chafe all the skin around the mouth and nose.

The Hands in Cold Weather.

An excellent and delightfully fragrant cold cream for rough hands, or face, can be made as follows: Take eight ounces of almond oil, one and one-quarter of an ounce of spermaceti, one and one-quarter of an ounce of white wax. Shred the wax and the spermaceti finely and put in a china jar. A small enamelware saucepan will do. Stand it in another saucepan about a third full of boiling water. Keep this simmering until the ingredients are entirely melted and then add a few drops of lavender oil and pour into small china pots. The preparation can be used as soon as it is cool and will keep for a long time.

Another invaluable lotion for hands that are inclined to be red in winter, even though they do not chafe badly, is lemon juice, eau de cologne and arin, equal parts of each. This be used for chapped hands.

The Winter Walk.

Walking is a desirable exercise at all times, but in winter when the air is bracing it is especially helpful. The hour's walk each day, briskly done, regularly followed, will be found to be the greatest health giver and best of laxatives. Who cannot find time to walk each day at least a few blocks—a real walk, not a hurried skip of a few minutes nor a languid, leisurely stroll, ended as soon as the walker feels a little bit fatigued? This tired feeling is the flag which signals that more walking is needed. If the exercise is persisted in as each day goes by the tired feeling will not be noticed. One should walk into and over and past the tired feeling until that second influx of strength is noted which runners call their "second wind." When this is done the walking is doing some good.

Brushing the Hair.

At night devote ten minutes to brushing the hair, using a stiff bristled brush and having the hair divided in four portions. Brush evenly and firmly, wielding the brush from the crown of the head to the ends of the strands of hair with an uninterrupted movement. First bring the brush down on to the scalp and drag it through the hair, using firm, brisk strokes, which will start the circulation in the scalp.

Rosy Finger Nails.

Rosy finger tips and pink nails are very pretty and when nature refuses to bestow them art furnishes a very natural substitute. After the hands are bathed rub the nails with equal parts of cinnamon and emery, then with oil of bitter almonds. Remember too high a polish is considered vulgar. The finger tips and palms can be fluted with a liquid rouge just a delicate pink.

If You Are Too Fat.

Buttermilk will make you thinner if you drink enough of it. Doing without breakfast is one way of reducing flesh. Eat your first meal at 1 p. m. and then eat sparingly. Eat no potatoes, beans, corn, peas or beets. All bread should be toasted.

Curlers for the Hair.

Curlers of any description are none too good for the hair, but the kinds where the hot iron does not come in contact with the hair itself are best. Then the kid one where no iron at all is used is better still.

Thoroughly Human.

Everybody looks at the first name on a subscription list before signing it. Don't know whether it's a human trait or an idiosyncrasy.

Every man is capable of doing his best—and he should always do it.

NEW HOME OFFICE BUILDING OF THE ASSOCIATION, PORT HURON, MICH.

ON June 18 the city of Port Huron, Mich., officially welcomed home Miss Bina M. West, supreme commander of the Woman's Benefit Association of the Maccabees, in recognition of her remarkably efficient work for the association. The reception was in charge of Mayor Black and the city commission and was participated in by all the societies, clubs and business organizations of Port Huron. To quote the resolution of the city commission, it was a remarkable tribute to "Miss West, able worker for fraternity and humanity."

The Woman's Benefit Association of the Maccabees gives its protection and fraternal interest to white women of good moral character. It is nonpolitical and nonsectarian, and dispenses its fraternity in fifty-five states and provinces.

Every year finds this association progressing, but the past four years have recorded its greatest advancement. Women, by securing fraternal protection, are free to seek out new fields of endeavor and become more independent and capable.

A woman's convention without one word of dissent is rather an unusual thing. This was the experience, however, of the recent eighth quadrennial convention of the association in New York. Every session was a model of business ability and parliamentary procedure, and plans were laid for the present quadrennial term which were aimed to meet the great and growing work of its 187,000 women.

Many important features were placed before the convention for decision, one being the changing of the name from the Ladies of the Maccabees of the World to the Woman's Benefit Association of the Maccabees.

Another important step taken was the acceptance of plans for a handsome new home office at Port Huron, Mich. This will be a large, magnificent two story white stone building on the main street of the home city of the order, where the supreme commander, Miss B. M. West, started her project twenty-three years ago. To give the reader an idea of how this society has progressed it will be of interest to know that Miss West started out with a $150 debt, no members, and unknown, to organize what today is meeting the needs of 187,000 women in the matter of home protection through fraternal insurance. Miss West has been a leader beloved and adored by her members, and as an insignia of their esteem the convention endeavored to prevail on her to accept the well earned salary of $10,000 a year for the next term. In a masterful address she declined, stating that the weal of the association was uppermost in her mind, not the remuneration.

Steps were taken at this meeting of representative women to endow a hospital service in every state, Ohio, Illinois and Michigan already by their service in satisfactory use this philanthropy every man quiring expert medical advice have it free of cost to herse!

Addresses were given by M. Dawson, fraternal instructor of New York city, and V. Barry, Michigan insurance broker, congratulating the on the signal success it has. "Your association," said Mr. Barry, "is the first woman's benefit so the United States to be established on a sound basis, and through the force of your peerless leader, Miss West, are the largest society of women in the world. I congratulate

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

Potatoes.

MR. EDITOR:

In a New York daily paper I saw a grocer's announcement which he headed with a large figure one, but makes no elucidations of the figure but goes on to say that "potatoes have not been so cheap in two hundred and fifty years, which is the age of New York City."

Now, Mr. Grocer, I beg to differ with you. Potatoes in the past have been much cheaper than they are now. The late Mr. R. S. Conover, whom it was my pleasure to have met frequently, during the time he was proprietor of the Delaware and Raritan Bay canal, in connection with which there were several farms, related incidents that occurred during his proprietorship, and also of the prolific potato crops that were raised on these farms. On one of these farms the manager carted a load of potatoes to New Brunswick to sell them. He accosted dealers there, but none of them wanted any potatoes. After spending the greater portion of the day there in an effort to sell the potatoes, he decided that the next store he stopped at, if the man did not want to buy them, he would give them to him. The farmer put the usual questions to him, and the man shook his head no. Then the farmer told the storekeeper, if he would unload his wagon he could have the potatoes. The grocer told the farmer, if he wished he could put them down in his cellar. The farmer decided not to do that and rode the load of potatoes home again.

In business conferences having become acquainted with Mr. James Parsons, who is a large manufacturer as well as an extensive farmer, and is one of the most congenial men I ever met, as upon an acquaintance of five minutes you become more familiar with him than you would with some men in five years, he also told of growing an extraordinary quantity of potatoes, and ordered his men to reserve what they thought would be necessary for the farm's use, and then requested them to cart the balance to the New Brunswick poor farm.

So I might fill columns with names of potato producers who worked strenuously to get clear of their potatoes without price and without money.

STATE'S SENTIMENT HAS

SAVED FISH AND GAME

That New Jersey, one of the oldest and most thickly settled of the states, and situated between two of the nation's densest centers of population, has been able to maintain her fame for good hunting and fishing has long been a source of comment among outside sportsmen. Younger states have lost their natural resources and are striving hard to rebuild them, while in New Jersey, fishing and hunting, instead of deteriorating, are of late years actually showing a steady improvement as a result of protection and restocking.

State officials do not hesitate to declare that the only secret of this wonderful record of conservation is a strong and favorable sentiment of an outdoor loving public backing the firm enforcement of the fish and game protection laws. But for these laws and the work of the state's wardens, every stream and lake in the state long ago would have been fished out and game fish would have become extinct in this commonwealth; game birds and animals would have been largely exterminated and the farmer's great winged army of defense—the millions of insect-eating birds—would have been practically wiped out by the thoughtless pot-hunter and alien.

The same condition governs seashore fishing. The deep sea angler owes as much to the protection of the fish and game law as does his brother who whips the inland streams for trout bass and pike. A few years ago it was predicted that seashore angling was doomed because of the encroachments of the big pound nets and sea-sweeping seines, but the state saved the day and the fish by timely legislation.

The state fish and game commission, its officers declare, seeks not only to guarantee a continuance of good seashore fishing for the vacationist, but to perpetuate for all the public a steady seafood supply, which greedy interests soon would destroy by unrestricted netting operations.

You may just as well tell your wife the truth; she'll find it out, anyway.

Folks are quick to discover the faults of wise men and the merits of fools.

SPORTING COMMENT.

THE SACRED HEARTS EASILY

WIN SECOND GAME OF SERIES

The Sacred Heart A. C. trounced the Empires in the second game of city championship series, last Sunday afternoon by the score of 6 to 4. This makes two victories for the Sacred Heart nine over the Empires.

Manager Molly was in the box for the victors and pitched a splendid game. The best the Empires could secure off his delivery was seven hits. He made eight of them whiff the air. In addition to this Molly starred at the bat, securing four hits in as many times up. Shultz's two hits were timely, they scoring two runs.

"Diddy" Maxfield pitched for the Empires and though he secured nine strike-outs, his delivery was not so effective, as eleven hits were secured off him.

The game throughout was hotly contested and afforded quite some excitement to the large number of fans who were on hand.

Both sides scored their first run in the second inning and the Sacred Hearts plunged into the lead in the next stanza. The Sacred Hearts scored a run in the fifth and sixth bringing their total to four. The Empires scored their last runs in the sixth which made the score tie.

The Sacred Hearts then shoved over two runs in the eighth and put the game on ice.

Clark starred at the bat for the Empires, he securing two hits.

This last victory for the Sacred Hearts make it four straight wins and they are going to try and continue their winning streak against the Helmetta Braves this Sunday afternoon.

The Likelier One.

The late Admiral Mahan was once arguing with a lady at a luncheon about the British navy.

"But, my dear madam," said the admiral, "it is hard to argue with you because you are so—er—pardon me—so ignorant."

"You remind me of the young wife who said to her brother about her volunteer husband:

"Isn't Jack just wonderful? Think! He's already been promoted to field marshal!"

"From private to field marshal in two months? Impossible!" said the brother.

"Did I say field marshal?" murmured the young wife. "Well, perhaps it's court martial. I know it's one or the other."—Washington Star.

Kipling's Tribute to Mark Twain.

Kipling wrote of Mark Twain: "He put his hand upon my shoulder. It was an investiture of the Star of India, blue silk, trumpets and diamond studded jewel, all complete. If hereafter in the changes and chances of this mortal life I fall to careless ruin I will tell the superintendent of the workhouse that Mark Twain once put his hand on my shoulder and he shall give me a room to myself and a double allowance of tobacco."

Contradicted.

A certain physician told some of his patients that as long as they kept their feet dry they would be safe from an attack of the grip. One day he was surprised to receive a letter from a patient in which the latter said that he had two wooden legs, and yet he had had the grip for five consecutive years.

Just Even.

A Massachusetts candidate for congress after the election filed a beautifully negative account of his campaign expenses. It said, "I received nothing, promised nothing, expected nothing, got nothing." So he would seem to be just even with the game.—Brownings Magazine.

HAMILL FAVORS WOMEN'S VOTES.

Congressman Says He Hopes New Jersey Will Grant Suffrage on Oct. 19.

Congressman James A. Hamill has come out unequivocally for woman suffrage. He says:

"I have observed with great interest and pleasure the rapidly with which women are coming into their political rights in this country. The cause of 'votes for women' is achieving the remarkable success it deserves. This success is to a large extent owing to what women have already accomplished in those parts of the country where the right to vote has been given them."

"Experience has demonstrated beyond question that they vote intelligently and for the best interests of the community. This has been especially notable where women have had the right to vote on certain questions relating to the welfare of children. The entry of women into the field of politics will have a most beneficial effect."

"I believe New Jersey should take the place it should rightly occupy in the column of progressive states by granting the right of suffrage to women. The election will be held on Oct. 19 next, and I will gladly do all in my power to help bring about the triumph of their cause."

Brashear and Edison For Suffrage.

New Jersey's greatest man, Thomas A. Edison, and Dr. John A. Brashear, Pennsylvania's "greatest citizen," are both suffragists.

In wishing other women to give suffrage both in glowing tribute have the credit to their wives.

Dr. Brashear, recently chosen by Governor M. G. Brumbaugh and Pennsylvania editors to represent Pennsylvania at the Panama exposition as its representative citizen, said, "My success in everything I attribute to my dear wife."

Dr. Brashear's second thought was the fight of other women for the right to have a voice as part of the government in the government.

Considering this he said:

"There is no reason why a woman should not vote if she wants to."

"During the life of my wife I always desired that she should have the same privilege I was enjoying, and in November I shall certainly vote so the wives of other men shall have the privilege I wished for my own."

At a banquet given in his honor in connection with the presentation of a gold medal Mr. Edison, following glowing tributes from numerous speakers, paid a glowing tribute to his wife, to whom, he said, he owed in large part the success that had come to him.

"Every woman in this country is going to have the vote," he said. "This is certain," he added.

A Suffrage Daily.

The Daily Suffragist, the paper within a paper, made its appearance in the New Brunswick Home News during the Woman's Political Union campaign there recently. It was the idea of the editor, but the staff of the Daily Suffragist consisted of Miss Emily Pierson, Miss Alyse Gregory, reporters, and Miss Violet Dean, the editorial writer.

One notable feature of the Daily Suffragist is the support of the weather man, for the weather is "always fair."

"Woman's place is in the home, but under special privilege she is sometimes allowed to send her wages as a substitute," said Alice Duer Miller, commenting on the finding of the Michigan commission on industrial relations that thousands of wives support their husbands.

TORCH FINDS THE WAY BLAZED.

Mayors For Suffrage.

Five mayors have joined the suffrage ranks since the beginning of August. They are Mayor H. O. Walling of Keyport, Mayor Francis C. Balle of Matawan, Mayor J. H. VanMeter of Atlantic Highlands, Mayor Ferd. Garretson of Perth Amboy and Mayor Robert E. Torrance of Kearny. Mayor Mark M. Fagan, whom suffragists had already claimed, also declared himself in writing.

These suffrage declarations by the mayors of five towns came in response to a letter from Mrs. Richard T. Newton, who had charge of the journey of the unlighted suffrage torch. Since the torch was to be handed on from town to town on its first day in the state, Mrs. Newton wished to be sure that it would be well received and wrote to the mayors. Each one replied, announcing himself in no uncertain terms in favor of the woman suffrage amendment. The suffragists are rejoicing in the certainty of the votes of these five leading men on Oct. 19.

Youthful but Sufficient Reasons For Suffrage.

The suffragists of Elizabeth a short time ago resorted to the ancient feminine plan of raising funds by making and selling cakes. Their sisters of the opposite party imitated them.

Little Margaret Ogden, aged nine, tasted both lots of cakes and, finding her own reasons for the suffrage faith within her, presented her mother with the following original essay on suffrage:

"Suffrage is better than until many ways. One they make more money. They don't get so sick as untils. Another they work harder. Another they don't crow like chickens, another they make better cake. Another they don't kill people. They work for the yellow till they are tired. Are banner always has the word in black over the yellow VOTES FOR WOMEN."

New York Times Calls to New Jersey Battle Line.

In a long editorial of Aug. 11 the New York Times points to the significance of the New Jersey special election on woman suffrage, which falls on Oct. 19. It says in part:

"Fresh from its many successes in the west, it thunders at the door of the long indifference of the middle and eastern states. Whether it would work well or ill, it is a matter of grave moment, passionately advocated or opposed by those keenly alive to its value or its danger to the public weal and to women. . . . Irrespective of the merits, friend and enemy of woman suffrage must desire a great turnout of the Jersey voters on Oct. 19. Not by an indifferent electorate, not by a scanty handful of ballots, should the decision be made."

Advice to Rebels.

"American women will win the vote because their campaign has been polite, dignified and tactful."

When the barons faced King John They were civil as could be; Doffed the crowns they all had on— They were well, they said, and he? Thus their liberty was won, Pretty manners set them free.

When the commons killed the king, Their behavior was the same. "Yes," they said, to draw the sting. "Really, sire, it's a shame!" For they knew the slightest thing Rough or rude would lose the game.

Washington was most polite To the British long ago. Said he fancied he was right; But, of course, one couldn't know. Had he tried to sulk or fight They'd have thought him simply low.

These examples, ladies, all, Should control your every act. Never argue nor recall Any crude, unwelcome fact. Revolutions rise and fall By the rebels' social tact. —Alice Duer Miller in New York Tribune.

Fifteenth Century Artists.

Artists in Italy in the fifteenth century were little better off than small shopkeepers. This is shown by the dowries they usually gave their daughters, which varied from $1,040 to $2,080, and it is related as an extraordinary instance that Andrea Mantegna gave his daughter $2,500 at the time of her marriage, which was about the close of the fifteenth century. Michelangelo, Raphael and Titian were the only painters of the fifteenth century who succeeded in attaining a position of ease. Michelangelo at his death left about $48,000, besides some real estate, to his nephew, Leonardo. Raphael's property was estimated to be worth $135,000, while Durer was worth at the time of his death only $31,650. In those days, however, pensions were frequently given to artists by sovereigns and cities.

Thorn Hedge of Ypres.

The town with the unpronounceable name, Ypres, once proved literally too thorny a problem for English besiegers. When Henry Spencer, bishop of Norwich, led his troops against it they tried in vain again and again to pierce the mass of thorn bushes that lined the exterior slopes of the ramparts; hence the name of Notre Dame-de-Thulue, "Our Lady of the Garden." In the Cathedral of St. Martin at Ypres and also a fair of Thuringia, fixed for the Sunday in August in honor of the hedge that saved the city.—L

Interested persons can obtain any information from Mr. Thomas Saddington, Manager of School, who will gladly furnish all details.

Workmen from Miller's Garage on Bordentown avenue were called out to separate a Hudson and a Buick automobile that had run into each other on the Cheesequake Road near the Hillmann residence about dark Tuesday evening. The machines were traveling in the same direction, it is said, when the head car stopped and the other unable to stop crashed into it. Miller's men pulled them apart and after making temporary repairs the machines were able to run home on their own power.

Wednesday evening a Hudson touring car and a Pope-Hartford roadster figured in a collision on the Bordentown turnpike at what is known as Rose's Corner. Both cars were considerably damaged but not

KRONMEYER'S BOAT NO MATCH FOR FRED ISELEY'S CRAFT

The boys are saying that Andrew Kronmeyer has claimed that his power boat is the speediest hereabouts. We all know that Kronmeyer is an enthusiastic water sport, and therefore does not like to take the back water from any craft. His many expressions, about attaining speed, has made a number of yachtsmen anxious to have a brush with his craft, but they did not happen to be out when he was. Tuesday night, however, Freddie Isely found Kronmeyer's boat at Keansburg and laid in wait for him with his (Isely's) speed boat.

Kronmeyer finally got started for Amboy, and Isely was there ready to give him a brush. Kronmeyer gained on the start, but when Isely opened up his engine he made rings around Kronmeyer, and came home with the positive impression that Kronmeyer's boat was not in it, and that hereafter we shall hear but little about the great speed made by Kronmeyer's craft.

TROLLEY CARS COLLIDED.

Sunday evening about seven o'clock a Jersey Central and a Public Service trolley car collided near the tunnel under the yard tracks on the Perth Amboy line. No one was injured although the passengers of both cars were considerably shaken up. The front of the Public Service car was smashed in and the car otherwise damaged so it had to be towed to the barns. The other car escaped with but little more than a ruined fender, its steel frame saving it from further damage. It is said that the dispatcher thought the Jersey Central car was clear when he gave the other car, which was coming toward this city, the right of way, when, as a matter of fact, the Jersey Central car had consumed some time at the top of the hill at Main street.

GRAND STAND COLLAPSES AT KEANSBURG; MANY INJURED

Ten persons were seriously hurt and several others received minor injuries Tuesday afternoon at Keansburg, in the collapse of a half section of the grand stand erected on the board walk of the New Point Comfort Beach Association for the accommodation of spectators at the fifth annual carnival of the Keansburg association.

The section broke down without any warning to the occupants, several hundred in number, many of them women and children, and they were thrown violently to the boardwalk, twenty-five feet below. Athletic contests were in progress at the time. The occupants of the stand were soon in a panic, and those who were not seriously hurt began scrambling to free themselves from the debris.

The band on the grand stand assisted in calming the panicky ones by playing lively airs, while the police and others worked to aid the injured. The collapse of the grand stand was due, it is believed, to weakness in construction of faulty timber.

The injured: Mrs. George Gould, Keansburg; right leg broken in two places. Mrs. Frederick Nichols, Brooklyn; injury to spine and left leg badly bruised.

Miss Frances Nichols, Brooklyn, her sister, back badly injured.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Riddlemann, Jersey City; bruises on legs and feet. Miss Mabel Barr, Bayonne; right arm sprained; two fingers of right hand broken.

Mrs. Laura Foulk, of Keansburg, back and leg injured.

Mrs. Charles Hellig, of 506 West Forty-sixth street, New York, right arm broken.

Mrs. L. J. Fendersen, Jersey City, lacerations of the left forearm, sprained shoulder and probable internal injuries.

Mrs. S. K. Schmidt, Jersey City, badly cut about the legs.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 28, 1915.

The Citizen extends thanks to Hon. Thomas J. Scully, for copy of "Yearbook of the Department of Agriculture, 1914."

The common council in an adjourned meeting last Monday night refused to accept resolutions of Board of Freeholders to take over portions of certain streets in this city. The city solicitor informed the body that the Board of Freeholders under the law must file said resolutions with the county clerk, and the council not having any information as to whether such action had been taken deliberately laid aside the resolutions. This information could have been easily ascertained by calling by telephone the county clerk's office, but, no, for some unknown reason the council did not take this step. We have been informed that the Board of Freeholders have filed the resolutions at the county clerk's office. In fact this was an action for the freeholders in which this city has no part.

A petition has been filed for the nomination of James K. Hackett for councilman in the Fourth Ward on the Republican ticket. Mr. Hackett has been prominent in politics, and a member of the executive committee of that ward for several years. Hon. A. H. Slover will, therefore, not be a candidate for re-nomination.

The Republican organization of the county has endorsed Mayor William S. Dey, of this city, as one of the candidates for freeholder. Councilman-at-Large Stratton coveted this honor, believing that his excellent run last fall against a strong Democratic candidate entitled him to consideration. Possibly he may get in the race at the primary, and if a winner secure the nomination that way.

The Democrats after much persuasion have received the consent of Richard U. Rue to run for the nomination of councilman in the First Ward. Their choice is a wise one, and it looks as though they have selected a winner. Mr. Rue is a man of business ability, and we believe he would make an excellent councilman. He stands high in the community, and has a host of friends who will undoubtedly rally to his support. The reins of government will be safe in his hands.

The Perth Amboy Press is the latest venture in the newspaper field, and will espouse the cause of the Republican party this fall. It is edited by Edward J. Peterson, who is a member of the Board of Health of Perth Amboy.

COUNTY PROGRESSIVE TICKET.

The Progressives of Middlesex County will have a ticket in the field this fall. This was decided at a meeting of the party's representatives from several of the districts in the county, held in New Brunswick Wednesday afternoon, and presided over by County Chairman James A. Edgar. Another meeting is to be held at Perth Amboy on Saturday, September 11, when the full county ticket will be announced and a dinner will be held, to be addressed by prominent members of the Progressive party.

The party workers discussed the matter of their legal standing at the primary, and no one was certain as to whether or not they could have a ticket at the primary. Legal advice will be secured thereon.

If it is found they are not entitled to a primary ticket they will nominate by petition, so as to get the names of their candidates upon the county ticket.

The matter of indorsing some of the nominees of the other parties was also discussed. In connection with this it was decided that if men were named on any of the other tickets, no matter which one, who would indorse the principles of the Progressives, the county committee would, if it saw fit, indorse these candidates.

Frank I. Pattison attended the meeting as the representative of John A. H. Hopkins, state chairman of the Progressives.

NO DECISION ON CUSTODIAN.

maintained the same and still remains the same. The new office carried the same salary as the collectorship, namely $600.00 per year. The occupant performed the duties of the custodian and never raised any objection until a year or so ago. The speaker stated that there wasn't ten hours work a month for the treasurer to do in taking care of his duties and that any claim of his being underpaid was, therefore, preposterous.

It also developed that the treasurer wants $180.00 per year, while the collector could possibly be persuaded to take the custodianship for $120.00 per annum. One of the members ventured the opinion that there were five hundred men in this city that would be only too willing to take the job as treasurer and fill the requirements of the law by acting as custodian of the school moneys without feeling that they were being imposed upon in the least. The fact that the duties of the treasurer are no heavier now than they were when the duties of treasurer and the collector were performed by one man at the salary that one office now pays puts a decided limp in any argument favoring an increase.

There were a number of bills read at the meeting but action upon them was deferred until some arrangement could be made whereby checks could be drawn in payment. Those presented were as follows:

Underwood Typewriter Co.	$190 00
N. Y. Telephone Co.	7 50

An application from L. M. Crosby, of Spotswood, for a position in the elementary department as teacher in case of a vacancy was ordered returned with enclosures together with the information that there was no vacancy.

Another application from Charles F. Barnason, of South River, took the same course.

The draft of one dollar issued in favor of Mr. Orlando Perrine for his services as custodian was returned with a letter which stated that he would not accept it as salary for his services as custodian of school moneys. Mr. Mason's motion that the communication be spread upon the minutes and the draft filed prevailed.

Upon motion of Mr. Grace the finance committee was empowered to meet with the council board of estimate and request a revision of the school budget to include an increase of five hundred dollars.

Adjournment was taken subject to the call of the president for a meeting to act upon the report of the finance committee on what legal procedure to follow in relation to the appointment of Collector Diebert as custodian.

RUTGERS GETS OVER $100,000

IN APPROPRIATIONS

The close relation between Rutgers College and the State of New Jersey can best be seen by glancing over the list of appropriations made the college by the legislature, amounting to over $100,000. The appropriations this year are slightly larger than before.

The amount for scholarships is $35,000, covering the largest number that can be active in one year. The Short Course grant is the same as usual, $20,000, and the Long Courses in Agriculture have been raised from $4,000 to $8,000. The Summer Session gets $10,000 and the Ceramic department, $7,500, a raise of $2,000 each. An appropriation of $4,000 was made for additional equipment in the Engineering and Chemistry departments.

The items for maintenance, repair and improvement of grounds and buildings at the College Farm remains the same as usual, a total of about $5,000. The annual interest of the Land Grand Fund, $5,800, was utilized for the use of the college as usual.

All these items concern the year November 1, 1915, to November 1, 1916. The Supplemental Bill, making additional appropriations for the year ending October 30, 1915, included $2,700 for scholarships, $2,500 for the Ceramic department and $6,500 for items at the Agricultural building. These items, however, have not all been made immediately available.

The Board of Freeholders Received
Bids for Improving South Amboy-
Keyport Road—Pavement to be
Brick and Bituminous Concrete — Divided in Two Contracts.

The Board of Freeholders met at the County Records building, New Brunswick, on Monday afternoon to receive bids for bridge and paving work. One of these bids was for improving the road between this city and the Monmouth County line. From this city to Morgan vitrified brick will be used, and from the N. Y. & L. B. R. R. to the county line will be bituminous pavement on the old concrete base.

There were nine bidders on the improvement to three sections of the South Amboy-Keyport road. On the first section from the South Amboy city line to the New York and Long Branch railroad tracks at Morgan section the bids were as follows: H. D. Sprout Contracting Co., Peokskill, $17,681.40; Newark Paving Co., $42,147.60; Utility Construction Co., New Brunswick, $43,662.29; Abraham Jellin, New Brunswick, $41,121.38; Conrad Sebolt, New Brunswick, $42,777.57; T. F. Dunnigan, Woodbridge, $45,990.17; T. H. Riddle, New Brunswick, $37,948.85; Meagher and Smith, Perth Amboy, $39,704.13. Liddle and Pfeiffer bid on three different grades of paving none of which was lower than any of the above bidders.

These same bidders also put in bids on the remaining two sections of the road continuing the work from the New York and Long Branch railroad tracks to the Monmouth County line at Whale creek, as follows:

Liddle & Pfeiffer, $46,671.52; Cleveland Trim Paving Co., New York, $48,942.59; Utility Construction Co., $44,304.37; A. Jellin, $40,885.65; T. H. Riddle, $41,403.85; Empire Construction Co., New York, $46,725.92; T. F. Dunnigan, $42,838.19; Franklin Contracting Co., $43,650.97; Eastern Paving Co., Philadelphia, $45,393.54.

Four bidders submitted figures for constructing a bridge over Mill brook on the Metuchen and Donhamtown road as follows:

Abraham Jellin, New Brunswick, $380; Francis Fee, Jr., Keasby, $520; Chandler & Hoth, New York, $539.90; Christopher Mazella, Metuchen, $780.

The Public Service Gas Company was given permission to open Prospect, Thomas, Ma'a and Water streets and Whithead avenue, South River, to lay gas mains. They will give a bond in $1,000 thereon.

Edward A. Quint, of New Brunswick, called the attention of the board to the facts that two or three bricks had dropped out of the third arch in the Albany street bridge over the Raritan river. Freeholder A. J. Gebhardt and the county engineer will investigate.

A temporary bridge is to be erected at South River while the new draw bridge is being built and to reach this Sayre & Fisher Co. have given the county the use of a right of way across their lands to April 1, 1916, with the understanding that the county will erect at the Sayre & Fisher water front of their brick yard, a close pile bulkhead. The Freeholders have agreed to do this and the General Engineering and Construction Company will build the bulkhead.

RECEIVER FOR TELEPHONE CO.

Upon application of Benjamin L. Lawrence of Elizabeth, Vice Chancellor Backes made an order Tuesday last appointing Robert Carsons of New Brunswick receiver for the Hudson and Middlesex Telegraph and Telephone Company. His bond was fixed at $50,000. Mr. Lawrence, who was represented by Theodore Strong, alleged that the company was insolvent. The application was not contested.

The Keystone State.

There are several theories as to how Pennsylvania came to be called the Keystone State. The one most generally accepted and the one most dear to all who own Pennsylvania as their native state, is that Pennsylvania decided the great issue of American independence.

At the meeting of the Continental congress in Philadelphia July 4, 1776, the vote adopting the Declaration was taken by states. Of the thirteen original states six had already voted in the affirmative and six in the negative, when the delegation from Pennsylvania came in. John Morton casting the deciding vote in the affirmative. Thus Pennsylvania, by her vote, decided and was named the Keystone State.

Another reason advanced is that in constructing a bridge between Pennsylvania avenue and Georgetown, Washington, a single arch was erected of stone left from building the walls of the capitol. On the thirteen "voussoirs" or arch stones, the names of the thirteen states were engraved. Pennsylvania, falling in the keystone of the arch, became still more widely known as the Keystone State.—Philadelphia Press.

Lubbock and the Bees.

In "Ants, Bees and Wasps" it is related that one summer some fifty years ago Sir John Lubbock became interested in a curious parasite of the humblebee. He wished to complete his investigations, but as the winter came on did not know where to get the bees, so he advertised.

In reply to his advertisement a man wrote offering him a supply of bees at one and six apiece. The price was high, but in the chase of science Lubbock did not demur, only when he had bought all the bees he required he wrote to the man and said, "Now that I have had the bees, for which I am greatly obliged, would you kindly tell me, to satisfy my curiosity, how you are able to procure them at this time of year?" The man wrote back quite courteously, but quite firmly, saying: "No. Since I can sell the bees at eight-pence each, I think it pays me better to go on doing so than to tell anybody else how to procure them."

The Alaskans.

According to the government statistics, the natives of Alaska are about 24,000 in number, and they are spread over more than 350,000 of the 590,000 square miles of the territory. Their small settlements extend along 10,000 miles of coast and on both sides of the Yukon river and its tributaries, for a distance of more than 2,500 miles. One of the supervision districts contains a full 100,000 square miles. The others average more than 65,000 square miles each. Of the natives of Alaska approximately 11,000 belong to six tribes of Indians in southeastern and southern Alaska and in the valley of the Yukon. About 11,000 are Eskimos on the western and northwestern coasts, along the Bering sea, the Bering strait and the Arctic ocean. Something more than 2,000 are Aleuts and mixed races through the Aleutian Islands.—Christian Herald.

The Admirable Towser.

"I've got the most wonderful dog in the world—the smartest, I mean," said one of a party camping in Canada last fall. "When I bring out my rifle he knows I'm going after deer, and he never offers to follow me, but if he sees me reach for my shotgun he knows that means partridges, and when I get to the woods I find him there waiting for me. Actually that dog knows the difference between a rifle and a shotgun."

"That's nothing," said another of the party from his place at the other side of the fire. "You fellows have seen my little Towser, haven't you? Well, when I begin to get out my fishing kit Towser runs up behind the barn and begins digging worms."—Saturday Evening Post.

Our Postal Service.

The beginning of the postal service in what is now the United States dates from 1639, when a house in Boston was employed for the receipt of letters for and from the old world. In 1672 the government of New York colony established a post to go monthly from New York to Boston. A general post-office was established in Virginia in 1692 and in Philadelphia in 1693. In 1780, when the federal government went into operation, the number of offices in the thirteen states was only about seventy-five.—New York American.

Chinese Language.

Where the Chinese language, written or spoken, came from nobody knows any more than they know where the original Chinese themselves came from. But it is probable that the primary Chinese characters existed 5,000 years ago pretty much as they do today.

SEVERAL WILLING TO GET IN SENATORIAL FIGHT

The New Brunswick Times says that the Democratic party organization in Middlesex county will line up almost solidly for Prosecutor W. Edwin Florance to succeed Dr. William E. Ramsay in the State Senate. Petitions placing Mr. Florance in nomination are in circulation and are being freely signed.

Another avowed candidate for the Senatorial nomination is Arthur A. Quinn, of Perth Amboy, present Assemblyman. Mr. Quinn has just been re-elected to the presidency of the New Jersey Federation of Labor, and his strength lies principally with the unionists of the county.

Chief worryment is given the Democratic leaders by the aspirations of former Mayor George A. Viehmann, of New Brunswick.

The key-note in the fight for Senator is the fact that the term of Judge Peter F. Daly expires early next year. His successor is certain to be a Democrat, as the selection will be made by Governor Fielder. The Governor is a particularly warm friend of Mr. Viehmann. The judgeship is expected to go to the man who has the recommendation of the State Senator from Middlesex.

In the event that Mr. Viehmann is elected Senator the belief is strong that Judge Daly will fall of re-appointment, and the names of John A. Coan and John P. Kirkpatrick are already being mentioned for the judgeship.

The organization candidates for Freeholder this fall will be the present incumbents.

The present Assemblymen, Dr. E. L. Loblein, of New Brunswick, Charles Anderson, of South River, and A. A. Quinn, of Perth Amboy, are backed for another term by the organization, but as Mr. Quinn is in the fight for State Senator it is believed another Perth Amboy man will be selected for Assembly honors.

WEEKLY LETTER TO FARMERS.

(By F. R. Stevens, Agriculturist,
Lehigh Valley Railroad.)

The continued rains which we have had during the harvesting season have brought on a condition which is somewhat discouraging. A great deal of hay and grain has been wet in the field and the rains have beaten down a considerable quantity of corn and other grains, as well as doing other damage. A few cases have come to my knowledge where clover and alfalfa have been given up for ruined and have been thrown in the barnyard to be trampled by the cattle and used as manure. This, it seems to be, a mistake. Clover and alfalfa are, of course, damaged, when they are soaked with water. The feeding value is damaged to some extent but not as badly as appearance would indicate. I have known of instances where alfalfa was apparently spoiled and thrown into the corner of a wood lot, but late in the fall taken out and fed to cattle where it was eaten up clean, and a considerable amount of good feed finally gotten from it. Instead, then, of throwing it in the barnyard it would be much better if it were spread loosely around the fence until it dries, which it will do some time or other, then put it in piles by itself for rough feeding.

The continued rains, while doing a great deal of damage, have also done some good. The soil is saturated with water which means ideal conditions for all kinds of fall seeding. Alfalfa can safely be seeded this fall and additional meadows for next year can easily be secured by disking and harrowing wheat and oat stubble and seeding to clover and timothy this fall. Rye and vetch all along the line, and crimson clover south of the New York and Pennsylvania line should give unusually good results in seeding during a fall like this. Not only is it an excellent fall for seed of this kind to catch, but the condition of the ground makes it quite imperative that orchards be given a cover crop of some heavy growing material which will help to take the water out of the soil and thus help with the maturing of this season's growth of wood. If this moisture remains in the ground a sappy wood growth is likely to result, increasing the possibility of winter injury. Cover crops generally, should be the order of the day and the quicker they can be gotten into the ground the better.

BREAKS COAL RECORD.

West Virginia broke all records in coal production in 1914 with an output of 71,707,626 short tons, valued at the mines at $71,391,408. This was an increase of about half a million tons over the production in the previous banner year, 1913, according to C. B. Leshner, of the United States Geological Survey. The State still maintained its position of second place among the coal producing States. Decreases in production in some parts of West Virginia were more than offset by increased output in new areas, where during the last two or three years development has progressed rapidly and many new mines have been opened. Unfortunately strikes among the coal miners in Ohio also enabled West Virginia producers to capture, for the time being at least, markets normally supplied by Ohio. Seventeen counties in West Virginia recorded increases in coal mining, Logan County alone producing nearly 2,000,000 tons more than in 1913.

Labor was plentiful throughout the year, the average number of employees being 78,963, with an average production per man of 908 tons for the year. The average production of each miner per working day reached the high figure of 4.52 tons. The time lost by strikes was 3 per cent of the time made. The number of fatal accidents in the mines, according to the Bureau of Mines, was 556.

On the Bosphorus

A Turkish Love Story

By GERTRUDE E. MOREHOUSE

Selma and Rabieh, two little Turkish girls, the former sixteen, the latter seventeen, living in Constantinople, went one day for a walk together along the bank of the Bosphorus. The location of Constantinople is beautiful, and since Leander swam what was then called the Hellespont to visit Hero on the opposite shore it has been associated with romance. History comes in for its share of interest from the time Constantine made the city on its European bank the capital of the Roman empire.

These two Turkish girls each wore the charshaf, the long gown of the women of that country, and veils over their faces. The custom of keeping the face covered is not as obligatory among Turkish women as formerly, and some of them dress in European costume. Yet these girls, being very young and unmarried, did not think of lifting their veils while walking where they would be liable to meet men. But coming to a grassy spot, where their faces would be to the water, they sat themselves down and, throwing their veils back, permitted the cool air to fan their faces.

The Bosphorus was covered with all sorts of craft, from the skiff to the ocean steamer lying at anchor, while on the opposite shore towered a profusion of buildings, minarets and trees. The boats did not come very near the slope on which the girls were sitting, so there was no necessity for them to let down their veils. They sat looking at the various craft out on the water, now a little steamer plying between different points on the strait, now a motorboat and now a small sailer with leg-of-mutton sails. It was all so charming, so soothing, the breeze was so refreshing that the maidens reclined on the slope, Rabieh laying her head in Selma's lap.

It was not long before Rabieh was dozing and Selma was blinking. There was a sharp point on one side of them which cut off the shore in that direction. A rowboat came round the point and passed within a few yards of them. Selma, who was nodding, suddenly started at seeing a young man with a pair of oars in his hands looking straight at her.

At sixteen a girl may be captured by a look. The young man, who was but a few years Selma's senior, was wrapt in admiration and expressed it in every feature of his face. To Selma he seemed so beautiful that for a moment she forgot to drop her veil. Then, remembering to do so, she shut off what was to the young man a vision of loveliness.

"Rabieh," exclaimed Selma, shaking her friend, "wake up and let down your veil! That boy you see pulling away came very near us. The young man in it is, oh, so beautiful! He has a face that must have been copied from that of Allah."

Rabieh yawned, arose, and the girls walked on.

It was not long after this that Selma and her mother were crossing the Bosphorus in one of the little steamers used for ferriage. They were seated in the harem, as all women's apartments in Turkey are called, and were untroubled. A sliver of wind blew aside a window curtain, and there on the deck without sat the young man who had looked upon Selma while she was sitting on the shore. For the second time the two pairs of eyes met, and for the second time through them two hearts leaped toward each other.

After that Selma saw the young man several times, though he did not see her, for she was always veiled. Once they passed each other on the Galata bridge, once in Stamboul and again in Scutari. Every time she met him she studied his face and either saw or fancied she saw the wrapt expression of a lover.

At the meeting in Stamboul, Selma was walking with her Aunt Lella.

"That is Orkhan, the son of a very dear friend of mine," said the aunt.

"Is he a fine young man?" asked Selma, with a tremor in her voice that she could scarcely conceal.

"A very fine young man indeed."

There was silence for some time between them, during which Lella had forgotten having met Orkhan. Presently Selma said:

"Aunt Lella, when will mamma arrange a marriage for me?"

"I don't know, child. Do you wish to be married?"

"Certainly. Doesn't every girl wish to be married?"

"Well, dear, I will speak to mamma about it."

Soon after this conversation Selma's mother, Gulistan, at her sister's suggestion determined to look about for a husband for Selma. She knew no men personally—Turkish women know no one but those of their own sex—so she made inquiries among her friends for a marriageable young man. Aunt Lella also took a hand in the matter and quite naturally called on Orkhan's mother, Mikri, to ask if a match could be arranged between Orkhan and Selma. Mikri said she would see about it.

One day Selma overheard her mother and her aunt talking about getting her a husband.

"Mikri says," said Lella, "that she proposed to Orkhan to get a wife for him, but he will not marry; that he is looking for a girl he has seen on the bank of the Bosphorus and again on a steamer. If he can find her he will marry her, but no one else."

This was very harrowing to Selma. The man she desired wanted her, and she wanted him, but could not find her. He must not be informed who or where she was, because a Turk sees his bride's face for the first time when he lifts her veil immediately after the wedding ceremony. An American girl would have found a dozen ways to make herself known without appearing to have anything to do with the matter. But Turkish women, especially the girls, are very helpless.

But Aunt Lella was a woman, and even a Turkish woman likes to have her own way. She knew nothing of the meeting between her niece and Orkhan, but his mother was the only woman she knew who had a marriageable son, and she determined to get him for Selma. Lella was wealthy, and she offered Mikri a large dowry for Selma if her marriage with Orkhan could be brought about. Mikri told her son that he must stop dreaming about the girl he had seen and, like a dutiful son, marry the woman she had provided for him. He promised to think about it and at last gave in because he need not be restricted to one wife and if he ever found the girl with whom he had fallen in love he could marry her as well.

One day Gulistan told her daughter that she had found a husband for her and that they must begin to make preparations for the wedding. Of late years there is not always an objection to letting the bride know something of the appearance of the man she is to marry. Gulistan, not dreaming that Selma had ever seen Orkhan, showed her his picture, telling her that he was to be her husband. Selma, who had been almost crazed at the thought of marrying any one except the man she loved, on seeing the photograph was like one relieved just before an expected execution. How she ever concealed her emotion she never knew herself.

Meanwhile Orkhan continued to look for the girl on whom he had set his heart, for the expense of living has risen in Turkey as well as elsewhere, and only wealthy men can afford more than one wife. The young man was very miserable, for he wished to find the girl he loved in time to break with the wife his mother had provided for him. But since he was permitted to look upon the face of no woman except his wife how could he find her? He had passed her three times without recognizing her, she being veiled.

The wedding day came, and he had not found her. The women were scattered, most of them smoking cigarettes and eating of sweetmeats. Then they were taken to inspect the apartments to be occupied by the bride and groom, in which were the wedding presents and the trousseau, the latter including articles of apparel belonging to the groom. Then the guests were seated in a large room to await the entrance of the wedding party. The bride, veiled, was brought to the door of the house, where she was met by the groom. He led her into the house and past the guests, who were elbowing one another to get a view of the bridal pair, into a chamber, the door of which was closed behind them.

This is the moment when at Turkish weddings the groom lifts his bride's veil and for the first time looks upon her face. Orkhan had proceeded thus far like one going to a funeral rather than a wedding. How the bride looked no one could tell, for her face was covered. The two stood alone. The groom, conforming to what was expected of him, raised the veil.

A pretty subject for an artist would be this incident—the man's face changing from indifference to surprise and delight at recognizing the girl he loved, she looking up at him lovingly, enjoying his surprise, mingling her happiness with his. Then they were locked in a long embrace.

Curiously enough, there is no other marriage ceremony in Turkey than this, though there is always a formal betrothal some time before. No religious ceremony corresponding to those of European peoples is required. The marriage with the Moslem is simply taking possession of his wife.

Listen to Your Conscience.

Almost daily in every breast there is some tragedy enacted. A plot and a counterplot, a hero and a victim, a climax and a catastrophe, remorse and restitution—all these confusedly intermingled with scenes of our inner consciousness. And he who selects out of it all as the type of his dominating thought the morbid and the hateful thus starves and shrivels up his own highest nature and poisons the lives of others. But he who in the midst of these chaotic scenes can listen attentively to the whisperings of the still, small voice thereby nourishes his soul to a degree of bigness and strength that make him a power for righteousness in any community. But the real secret of materializing our highest thoughts in the form of deeds is to act readily and willingly upon the promptings of the inner spirit. To procrastinate, however, is in time to render this inner voice forever silent.—Symphony Calendar.

Told to Earn His Own Salary.

Commodore Vanderbilt discovered in James H. Rutter, then in the employ of the Erie railroad, a man he believed the freight department of the Central needed. It is related that some time after he took charge of the Central's traffic office Rutter called on the commodore to submit a plan for improvement. When he had stated the case the president looked at him sharply and asked:

"Rutter, what does the New York Central pay you $15,000 a year for?"

The reply was, "For managing the freight traffic department."

And then the commodore said, "Well, you don't expect me to earn your salary for you, do you?"

Rutter went out and carried through his plan on his own judgment. The result was highly satisfactory. Rutter became president of the Central.

Ask $7,000 for Alleged Injuries.

For injuries his eleven-year-old daughter received on the "human roulette wheel" in the Steeplechase Amusement Park, at Asbury Park, Gustav P. Marx of Elizabeth has brought suit for $7,000 against the Summer Amusement Company of that place and New York, proprietors of the park. The girl, Miss Agnes Marx, is alleged to have sustained a compound fracture of the hip last year when she was thrown from the wheel against an iron railing. The suit which is in the Monmouth County Circuit Court, will probably be tried in September.

Brew President of State P. O. S. of A.

Election of W. R. Brew of Audubon as president of the State Camp of New Jersey, Patriotic Order, Sons of America, over William P. Steinhäuser of Asbury Park, after a spirited contest, marked the closing session of the twenty-seventh annual state convention of the order at Turn Hall, Elizabeth, last week. Prior to adjournment the convention adopted a resolution thanking the press and the city at large for courtesies extended.

Amendments introduced for the revision of the order's constitution relative to changing the method of representation at conventions and also imposing a per capita tax were defeated. It was shown that funds in the treasury for the next six months are sufficient to meet all needs, and that the additional levy on the subordinate camps will not be necessary.

Close to 400 delegates attended, which is considered an excellent showing as compared with that of last year at Wildwood, when a delegate from each twenty-five members attended, instead of one for each fifty members, as was the case this year. Next year's meeting will be the third Tuesday and Wednesday in August at Atlantic City.

The contest for state inspector was won by Howard T. Jarrett of Bordentown, who defeated Charles W. Lamson of New Brunswick. Oliver Hoffman of Frenchtown defeated J. F. Weeks of Somerville for state guard. There were no other contests except for delegates to the national convention at Baltimore next month.

Twenty-one delegates were chosen. W. W. Norris of Camden and Henry Frech of Somerville were tied for delegate, each receiving 182 votes. A second ballot resulted in favor of Frech, who received 179 votes to Norris's 110, some of the delegates not voting.

Camp No. 71 of Mt. Holly received a prize banner for having made the largest membership gain during the year—121—while Camp No. 6 of Trenton got another prize banner for having made a big gain in its membership. Camp No. 7 of Trenton got a special prize for Mercer County, having gained 115 members since the last convention.

A resolution to have the state laws altered so that G. A. R. posts may use initials on the American flags placed in cemeteries on Memorial Day was adopted after some debate for and against the proposition. The convention was unanimous in favoring some steps to prevent the desecration of these flags.

A resolution urging the amendment of the state election laws, so that flags could be flown from poles outside election polling places was defeated, members holding that the plan was not feasible.

National Secretary Charles H. Stoes of Philadelphia made an address and installed the newly elected officers. A telegram of sympathy was sent to William Weand of Philadelphia, secretary of the order in Pennsylvania, expressing the hope that he would recover from illness. Resolutions of respect on the deaths of Past President Charles R. Blackman of Atlantic City and President Thomas J. Pritchett of Palmyra were also adopted.

The delegates chosen to the national convention at Baltimore are:

W. C. Cutter, Trenton; C. C. Shipps, Delanco; Edward Morgan, Palmyra; S. H. Rennells, Ridgely; H. J. Blohm, Penna Grove; Mr. Frech, J. T. Plaskett, Merchantville; E. C. Meyerhoff, Jersey City; Rev. Harry P. Grimm, Howell; F. C. Torrey, Lakewood; George W. Peters, Trenton; A. J. Haines, Somerville; George Morris, Washington; E. L. Cloud, Woodbury; A. L. Tilton, Atlantic City; William P. Steinhäuser, Asbury Park; W. E.

Beers, National Park; S. E. Golder, Mt. Holly; E. W. Slocum, Elberon; H. B. Weller, Mt. Pleasant; J. C. Huston, Lakewood; W. H. Reese, Phillipsburg.

Receiver for Keyport Business.

Stuart Bavie has been appointed temporary receiver of the firm of Wadley Brothers of Keyport. He took charge Saturday. Under the order of the Federal Court he is authorized to continue the coal and ice business in which the firm engaged until the selection of the trustee, which will take place September 3. The firm, which is composed of Albert W. Wadley and Ernest W. Wadley, purchased the business from Jesse N. Beers about three years ago. The scheduled liabilities amount to $35,000 and the assets are given as almost the same amount.

North Plainfield Mayor Not to Run.

Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., of North Plainfield, who is completing his second term, announced Saturday that he would not seek re-nomination. Last week a committee of Democrats and Republicans waited on Mr. Clark and tried to persuade him to consent to run again. This leaves only one candidate, W. L. Smalley, former councilman and a brother of former Mayor Newton B. Smalley, who will enter the Republican primaries.

Fire Damages Auto.

An automobile driven by Herman Bartsch, who has an automobile agency at 10 Diecker street, Newark, was partially destroyed by fire Monday morning in front of a garage, at Red Bank, when Mr. Bartsch stopped for some gasoline. The tank overflowed and gasoline dripped into the motor, where it ignited when the motor was started. Mrs. Bartsch who was seated in the automobile, was burned about the ankles before she could jump from it. The damage is about $250. Mr. Bartsch was returning home after spending Sunday with relatives at Red Bank.

Rob Seward's Policeman's Home.

Hans Simonson, a policeman on the Seward police force, was patrolling the beach at that place Saturday night and his wife and daughter were out calling. In their absence thieves entered their house near the Central Railroad Station and got away with $33 in cash, a gold watch and other valuables. The fact that thieves had visited the house was discovered when Mrs. and Miss Simonson returned home.

Ten Thousand Buck Wilson.

Approximately 10,000 persons Sunday morning pledged their support to President Wilson in his efforts to keep peace, in a resolution adopted by the congregation in the Auditorium, at Ocean Grove. The resolution was first read from the platform by Rev. Dr. Aaron E. Ballard, president of the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association. The congregation then endorsed it by a standing vote.

Following this action, Rev. Dr. T. H. Lewis, president of the Western Maryland College, preached a sermon on the life of John Wesley.

The text of the resolution read: "Resolved, We, the members of this congregation, worshipping under the flag of peace, extend our greetings to the President of our country, pledge him our support in his efforts to keep this republic safe from the barbarity of war, and pray that he may not be swerved from his purpose to make America an example to the world, and that he may continue to lead us in the paths of peace."

The resolution will be forwarded to the President.

Hold Pair as Horse Thieves.

John Repecka and Joseph Wasinsky were arrested at Perth Amboy early Sunday on a charge of horse stealing and on Monday were committed to the county jail. Patrolman William Clooney saw them drive into the city before daylight, the horse covered with foam. The two men claimed that they had hired the horse in Keyport, and were driving to New York. Clooney detained them to make inquiries and found that the horse and buggy were stolen from Joseph Jaffe in Keyport. When searched at police headquarters, Wasinsky, it is said, was found to be armed with a heavy caliber revolver, fully loaded. An additional charge of carrying concealed deadly weapons was made against him.

Fire Destroys Doctor's Home.

Fire of unknown origin destroyed the office and residence of Dr. Edward K. Hanson, in Market street, Perth Amboy, early Sunday morning. The blaze apparently started in the kitchen, where there had been no fire for hours. Damage to the building and contents aggregates $2,000 and is covered by insurance. Many of Dr. Hanson's instruments were destroyed.

Vandals Wreck Interior of Pastor's House.

Beds covered with a sticky substance resembling molasses, soft pillows and bureau covers daubed with ink, a coat and a white serge dress slashed with a knife, furniture damaged, silverware scattered about the floor, pictures turned upside down, contents of closets and bureau drawers thrown indiscriminately about—such is the condition in which Rev. R. W. Mark and family of Woodbridge found their residence on their return from a one-month auto trip in New England.

Discovery of the vandalism was made Saturday, and Monday Mrs. Stephen Saepeke went to the home of Mr. Mark's sister in New York to apprise them of the damage.

Two weeks ago Saturday neighbors found what appeared to be crepe hanging from the front door knob of the Mark's residence. On investigation they discovered that some one had tied two stockings about cabbage and rhubarb leaves, so that from a distance the bundle had the appearance of streamers tied to palm leaves. The affair was attributed to jokers and was forgotten.

Saturday night, however, members of the parish noticed several cans of beans, peaches and other fruit and vegetables on the kitchen table. Trying the kitchen door, they found it was unlocked. An inspection showed the house had been ransacked from top to bottom. Two or three more stockings like those previously found tied to the front door were picked up in the hall, and the premises generally were in disorder.

Warrant Out For Illegally Selling Liquor.

As the result of an investigation conducted during the past ten days by Chief of Police Patrick C. Kiely, of Plainfield, a warrant was sworn out Monday morning for the arrest of Adolph Ruehl, proprietor of the Netherwood Hotel, on a charge of illegal selling of liquor. It is asserted that both beer and whisky has been purchased by representatives of Chief Kiely during the past ten days.

Ruehl opened the hotel July 31 and was preparing to make application to the Common Council for a license this week. The hotel has been closed for several months. It was only a few days after the place was opened that intimation came to the police that liquor was being sold. Sunday night Chief Kiely, Mayor Leighton Calkins, Police Lieutenant Maurice Higgins and Patrolmen Welsh and Martin visited the hotel. Ruehl remained outside while the others entered the place. It is alleged that a number of persons were found drinking and that it was admitted the liquor had been purchased at the hotel shortly before the officials entered.

OUR PUBLIC FORUM

Peter Radford
On Church and State

The recent action of one of the leading churches of this nation, in annual convention, demanding that the laymen vote only for candidates for office whose views coincide with those of the clergy on one of the leading political issues, and direct and indirect efforts of other church organizations to interfere with the freedom of the ballot, make one of the greatest perils of this age, and present a problem that should receive thoughtful consideration of both laymen and citizens.

Suckling babes may well squirm in their cradles when ministers in convention assembled release the hearts of men and grab them by the throat, for Christianity has broken down, religion has become a farce and the pulpit a failure. When the church substitutes force for persuasion, command for conviction and coercion for reason, the sheriff had as well pass the sacrament, plain-clothes men take charge of the altar and policemen bury the dead, for why a church?

It is as dastardly a crime against government for a minister to undertake to deliver the votes of his parishioners to a candidate, as it is for a ward heeler to deliver a block of votes to a political boss, and both ought to be prosecuted, for the law should be no respecter of persons.

It is as objectionable for a convention of ministers to seek by canonical law to control the votes of church members as it would be for a convention of manufacturers to issue orders for their employees to vote for a certain candidate. Such conduct is offensive to decency, business morals and a crime against society. Any convention, whether composed of saints or sinners, rich or poor, white or black, that seeks to prostitute power and coerce conscience ought to be broken up by the police and its leaders arrested for treason.

A crime by any other name is a crime just the same. An ecclesiastical robe cannot sanctify treason, authority to preach does not carry with it license to become a political ringster, or the right to teach us how to pray give a permit to tell us how to vote. No man in joining the church should sacrifice his citizenship, forfeit his constitutional liberties or subordinate his duty to the state. The earth many times has been drenched with the blood of our forefathers fighting to throw off the ecclesiastical yoke from the state, and the suggestion of a return to these medieval conditions with their horror and their torture should not be tolerated for a moment.

Laws should be passed prohibiting any preacher, or combination of preachers, from delivering or attempting to deliver their membership or congregation to any candidate for office, and suitable legislation should be passed preserving the sanctity of the pulpit from political vandalism. It is as much a menace to church and state for a politician to occupy the pulpit as for a minister to preach a political sermon. He has no more right to preach his politics from the pulpit than a teacher has to teach his politics to his pupils. A preacher cannot make political trickery righteous by usage any more than he can make profanity respectable by practice. It is one of the ironies of fate that a preacher may become a scandal as well as a glory to civilization.
