SCHOOL EXPANSION HITS STANDSTILL ; BOARD DECIDING ON CONSULTANT

The question of public school expansion seems to have hit a temporary standstill as the board of education decides, upon the recommendation of state educators, whether or not it will hire a private planning consultant. According to Board President Fred-eric Reese, this is the situation the board faces after meeting on Tuesday afternoon with Dr. Robert Spare, consultant of school planning, Robert Withey, assistant director of secondary education, both of the State Dept. of Education, and Robert Blunt, County Superintendent of Schools.

The board had invited the educators to meet to outline what had recently been done in site availability and a report by City Engineer Edward Reilly on the feasibility of the water works tract was discussed. Reilly's report detailed the costs in constructing approaches to this site and those listed were building a bridge over the Raritan River Railroad at the end of Stevens Ave. and landscaping approaches either from Portia St. or Broadway.

Mr. Reese said the board had not yet made any decision on whether or not it would hire a private consultant, but should this be done, a complete evaluation of the community, its present educational facilities and its needs would be made with recommendations on whether a new high school should be built or whether to consolidate with another community.

The water works tract is the second site investigated as a school site. Previously, the board had decided on the landfill as a site and had received approval from the State Dept. of Education on this location. A year ago board officials felt they were ready to approach an architect on the landfill and new borings on its feasibility were authorized by the City Council. Before results of the borings had been announced, however, the N. J. Dept. of Conservation and Economic Development, through its director, Robert Roe, announced that the landfill was undergoing a separate feasibility study on behalf of aluminum concerns interested in building there. This study was also under the auspices of Jersey Central Power & Light Co. This lead to the board of education's decision on looking elsewhere for a school site and the choice of the water works tract for further study.

Commenting that the city hall site had been offered and that state officials feel it is inappropriate because of insufficient size, Mr. Reese said he "doubted that it would now be reconsidered as a school site."

Board To Pay Summer School Tuition

On the recommendation of Schools Superintendent Eugene Dobrzynski, the board approved payment of tuitions for students wishing to take laboratory courses in physics and chemistry at the Sayreville War Memorial High School. This is a practice continued from previous years. Only South Amboy residents will be entitled to this free tuition. The board also approved the implementation of Spanish I and II as part of a general studies curriculum for 1967-68.

The resignation of Gerard Grande, who taught biology and general science, was accepted, and Melvin Dyke was hired to teach science and history. Mr. Dyke graduated this year from Newark State Teachers College and will receive a starting salary of $5800.

New System Proposed

A letter was received from Dr. D. D. Griffith, medical examiner, who asked the board to consider a new method of medical examinations of students, based on guidelines set by the State Dept. of Education. This method would have students in the 1st, 6th and 11th grades, plus all athletes, given a thorough examination each year instead of the cursory examinations now done on all students. The board will discuss this proposition prior to their regular meeting on July 26.

At the request of member Mrs. Howard Ervin, the superintendent will ask the Streets Dept. to periodically sweep the George St. playground during the summer months as it is open to vacationing students.

The superintendent announced that housecleaning had begun in both schools and the board approved the inside and outside cleaning of windows which will be done by Keyport Window Cleaners at a cost of $600. Mrs. Ervin suggested that in the future this job be done prior to graduation.

A letter received from the Women's Auxiliary of the South Amboy Memorial Hospital requested the loan of chairs for a public skating show they are sponsoring on September 24 and approval was given for this request.

Supt. Dobrzynski was authorized to advertise bids for the inside painting of the high school building.

Two letters were read by the superintendent, one commending a student art show and the other from a former student commending the school system. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Elams complimented the art director, Mrs. Lousita Reese, and her students for the wide-range art exhibit recently held at the South Amboy Public Library. The other letter, from former student Cpl. J. E. Mihok, USMC, commended the school for the guidance and education he had received as a student and which had been instrumental in his military position in personnel.

DO WE OR DON'T WE HAVE A WATER SHORTAGE?

The answer to this question, as given by the Board of Public Works at last Tuesday night's meeting, is an emphatic NO.

A letter, written by Superintendent Charles F. Thompson, clearly states the alleged misunderstandings concerning the status of the water situation in South Amboy. Mr. Thompson's letter to the Board of Public Works follows:

"Board of Public Works
South Amboy
New Jersey
June 26, 1967

Gentlemen,

I would like the Board of Public Works to request the members of the governing body to please contact this office before making any public statements concerning the Water Department. I am available at all times to supply any information they may need so that they may give a true picture of conditions as they exist.

In reference to published statements concerning our water situation, I know they were speaking with civic pride and did not intend to make any statements that were in conflict with the policy of the Water Department, but, it must be confusing to the residents of South Amboy to read a statement in the paper saying that there is no water shortage and at the same time receive a request from the Board of Public Works to conserve water during the peak hours of operation, (8 a.m. to 9 p.m.), and to water their lawns, wash their cars or fill their pools after 9 p.m.

When the councilmen say there is no shortage of water, they are right as far as available water in the ground and in our reservoir at the plant, but, our problem is not a shortage of water but the inability of our present distribution facilities to keep up with the demand. If the residents of South Amboy will go along with our request for conservation they will be helping to meet these peak demands.

It is not a very nice feeling to be at our water plant on a hot Saturday or Sunday in July or August, with our supply pumps running continually at full capacity and see the chart showing the height of water in the tank falling steadily. You try not to think what would happen in case of mechanical failure or extraordinary demands for water such as a major fire.

With these facts in mind, I am sure you can see why there should be only one source of authority for statements regarding water policy.

Sincerely,
(s) Charles F. Thompson"

During the time of questions allotted the Press, it was brought out, by Thompson and the commissioners of the Board of Public Works, that for every thousand gallons of water pumped during the peak hours, more than eleven hundred gallons are drawn from the tank. After 9 p.m., when the demand falls off, the pumps are able to bring the tank back up to full capacity by midnight.

A notice, advising the water purchasers of this situation, will be mailed with every water bill. The board expressed confidence that the people of South Amboy will cooperate in their efforts to conserve water whenever and wherever possible.

He said that even part-time applicants would be considered.

Letters To The Editor

An Open Letter To Parents:

About a week after Memorial Day, one of our members picked up seven American Flags from one section of Christ Church Cemetery, which had been torn from their staffs. Presumably this was done by children, to use for arrows. Were they your children?

There were also many memorial flags of fire companies and patriotic organizations lying on the ground.

We think it terrible when we hear of the desecration of the Flag in New York City and other places, but is this practice any worse than removing flags from the graves of our honored dead?

Don't you think it about time we taught our children respect for the American Flag?

WORTH TALKING ABOUT

"In recent years the world has experienced a tremendous growth in knowledge. But this has brought a corresponding problem—how to handle the information we amass. Today improved methods for collecting, storing, retrieving and distributing information are essential. We are deeply challenged to provide systems and services that will put the right knowledge in the right place at the right time."

Frederick R. Kappel

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH NEWS

Beginning Sunday, July 2, Sunday School classes will begin at 9 a.m. The worship service will begin at 10 a.m. Careful note should be made of these changes, as they will continue through August.

People come to church for several reasons. Probably down the list in motivation is the desire to be benefited mentally and physically by the hour of corporate worship. Yet medical statistics and scriptural injunctions give every reason to believe that there is a direct effect on one's physical, emotional and mental well-being by regular association with the spiritual resources of the church, most importantly with God Himself. "The Medicinal Benefits of Church Attendance" is the sermon topic for this Sunday.

On July 9 and 23, Rev. Arthur S. Dodgson will be ministering in the Sunday School departments and at the 10 a.m. worship service. Mr. Timothy Peterson, recently graduated from Crozer Theological Seminary, will minister to the church on July 16. David Brown, pastor of the church, will be in the pulpit on July 30 and will have as his guest Rev. Edmond Caes, furloughing missionary from Rome, Italy.

RECEIVES AWARD

Charles W. Wiley

Charles W. Wiley of 5 Fielek Terr., Parlin, is among recipients of Excellence Awards in an essay competition on "The Role of Business in the Cold War" conducted by the American Security Council and sponsored by the Schick Safety Razor Company.

Military officers, university professors and administrators, corporation officers, advertising account executives, journalists, attorneys, homemakers and self-employed businessmen were among more than 1,000 persons submitting essays in the $100,000 competition. Excerpts from papers earning Excellence Awards, as well as some from those receiving participation recognition, will be incorporated into the analysis of cold-war responsibilities of American business to be published by the American Security Council in book form later this year under the title "The Business Gap in the Cold War."

The contest was devised as a public service by Patrick J. Frawley, Jr., chairman of Schick's executive committee.

The American Security Council was established in 1955 to provide the private sector of society with an organization through which it might utilize its talents and resources in helping to meet the Communist challenge to peace and freedom. Through it, corporations and the self-employed businessman work together and with others in the private sector, marshalling the nation's unsurpassed business capabilities to promote the country's most valuable commodity, freedom.

Representative of the Council's program is a study on "The Changing Strategic Military Balance - USA vs. USSR," made at the request of the House of Representatives Armed Services Committee, to be released by the council shortly. In addition to business firms, 360 colleges and universities and 188 non-profit organizations cooperate in the council's program.

Mr. Wiley is a newsman, research specialist and lecturer. He received a B.S. degree from New York University.

POST OFFICE INCREASES PACKAGE WEIGHT LIMIT

Mailers will be able to send 25 pound parcels between first class post offices which are 150 miles or more apart starting July 1, Postmaster George Stader reminded patrons today. The present weight limit is 20 pounds, he said.

This is the first of five increases scheduled to take effect annually until 1971, maximum size will be authorized between all first class post offices. Size limitations are now 72 inches in combined girth and length.

The next increase, on July 1, 1968, will raise the weight limit to 30 pounds. July 1, 1969, the weight limit will be increased from 30 to 40 pounds; on July 1, 1970, the size will be increased to 78 inches; and on July 1, 1971, the size is scheduled to be increased to 84 inches.

Postmaster Stader also reminded mailers that parcels weighing up to 40 pounds can be mailed between first class post offices less than 150 miles apart. Packages addressed to and from 2nd, 3rd, and 4th class post offices, Alaska and Hawaii are not affected by the increase in size and weight provisions of the Public Law 89-573, which became effective January 1, he said. Parcel post mailings to and from these offices remain at 70 pounds and 100 inches.

With the 4th of July coming up next week, perhaps the following history of our national anthem, "The Star Spangled Banner," will be apropos:

Our national anthem is a poem inspired by a battle. It is also the story of that battle, the Battle of Baltimore, fought in September, 1814, when a British fleet and infantry force tried to capture the city. How the poem came to be written and how it became the national anthem of the United States should be known to everyone.

In August, 1814, the British captured Washington. In returning to their ships, they passed through Upper Marlboro, Maryland, where they made a prisoner of Dr. William Beanes, an elderly and respected physician. They accused him of unfriendly acts toward British soldiers.

Francis Scott Key, a lawyer and friend of Dr. Beanes, obtained President James Madison's permission to visit the enemy fleet and ask for the doctor's release. Under a flag of truce, Key sailed aboard a small boat with John S. Skinner, the American agent for exchanging prisoners with the British. Down the Chesapeake Bay, near the mouth of the Potomac River, Key found the enemy fleet. The British promised to free Dr. Beanes, however, since they were going to attack Baltimore in a few days, they would allow no one to go ashore.

Landing at North Point, near the mouth of the Patapsco River, 12 miles from Baltimore, the enemy found General John Stricker's militia force barring their way. American sharpshooters killed General Ross, the British commander, and a brisk battle followed. The Americans were compelled to retire a short distance, but the invaders made no further attack. Stricker then withdrew to the main defenses, the high land east of Baltimore, near Patterson Park. The next day, September 13, the British moved close to the city but dared not attack the strong and well-manned defenses. Instead they asked the commander of the fleet to bombard Fort M'Henry, the main defense of Baltimore harbor.

For 25 hours, the British vessels poured shells, rockets and solid shot upon the Fort. The defenders fired in return, but their guns were not powerful enough to reach the British fleet.

Before the bombardment began, Francis Scott Key and the other Americans were placed aboard their small sailing ship under guard. All day and all night, while the furious bombardment continued, they watched the battle. During the night the guns were silent for a time, and they feared that the Fort had surrendered. To their great relief, dawn showed the American flag still flying proudly over Fort M'Henry. The British fleet prepared to withdraw. The guards were ordered to their own ships, and the Americans were free. Baltimore had been saved.

Overwhelmed with relief and joy, Francis Scott Key began to jot down some of his thoughts. What was to be the national anthem began to take shape in his mind. When the party reached Baltimore, Key lost no time in writing out in full the poem known as "The Star Spangled Banner." soon it was being sung to an old tune called "Anacreon in Heaven."

Slowly growing in popularity, "The Star Spangled Banner" became our unofficial national anthem long before 1931 when Congress passed a bill making it official.

"The Star Spangled Banner" is the story of Key's anxious vigil during the night of September 13-14, 1814. But, more than that, it tells us how the poet felt when his country was in danger, when his friends were under fire, and the future was at stake. It is our country's song of faith, trust and belief in the peaceful future of all mankind.

The manuscript, completed by Key on September 14, 1814, came into possession of the late Henry Walters, art collector of Baltimore. When Mr. Walters died in 1931, he left his art gallery to the city of Baltimore. The manuscript, however, as a part of his personal estate, was offered at auction in 1933 and acquired by the trustees of the Walters Art Gallery to keep in Baltimore. In 1953, by arrangement with the trustees of the Gallery, it was purchased by the Maryland Historical Society for the sum of $26,400, the amount given for it in 1933. Mrs. Thomas C. Jenkins donated the entire cost of the manuscript and of the marble niche in which it is installed, as a memorial to her late husband's mother, Catherine Key Jenkins, a cousin of Francis Scott Key.

Jimmy Duggan has submitted his copy of the song, "Where the Raritan Gently Flows", by J. J. Kenah, and as soon as a copy of the music can be made (one that can be photographed) it will be run in this column. Jimmy tells me that Kenah was in charge of the cloakroom of the House of Representatives during the time of the late Congressman Thomas Scully and that he, Kenah, had his song played by the famous Marine Band during one of their concerts. The date on the manuscript is 1910.

Charles W. Wiley of 5 Fielek Terr., Parlin, is among recipients of Excellence Awards in an essay competition on "The Role of Business in the Cold War" conducted by the American Security Council and sponsored by the Schick Safety Razor Company.

Military officers, university professors and administrators, corporation officers, advertising account executives, journalists, attorneys, homemakers and self-employed businessmen were among more than 1,000 persons submitting essays in the $100,000 competition. Excerpts from papers earning Excellence Awards, as well as some from those receiving participation recognition, will be incorporated into the analysis of cold-war responsibilities of American business to be published by the American Security Council in book form later this year under the title "The Business Gap in the Cold War."

The contest was devised as a public service by Patrick J. Frawley, Jr., chairman of Schick's executive committee.

The American Security Council was established in 1955 to provide the private sector of society with an organization through which it might utilize its talents and resources in helping to meet the Communist challenge to peace and freedom. Through it, corporations and the self-employed businessman work together and with others in the private sector, marshalling the nation's unsurpassed business capabilities to promote the country's most valuable commodity, freedom.

Representative of the Council's program is a study on "The Changing Strategic Military Balance - USA vs. USSR," made at the request of the House of Representatives Armed Services Committee, to be released by the council shortly. In addition to business firms, 360 colleges and universities and 188 non-profit organizations cooperate in the council's program.

Mr. Wiley is a newsman, research specialist and lecturer. He received a B.S. degree from New York University.

CAKES NEEDED FOR CARNIVAL

The Sacred Heart Parish Carnival, which opened last Sunday and has been doing capacity business, will continue until Saturday, July 1, until midnight when a new Chrysler will be raffled.

Mrs. Rose McCarthy and Mrs. Theresa Mauro, co-chairmen of the cake booth, said that homemade baked goods are still needed and may be dropped off Friday and Saturday evenings at the booth.

POST OFFICE INCREASES PACKAGE WEIGHT LIMIT

Mailers will be able to send 25 pound parcels between first class post offices which are 150 miles or more apart starting July 1, Postmaster George Stader reminded patrons today. The present weight limit is 20 pounds, he said.

This is the first of five increases scheduled to take effect annually until 1971, maximum size will be authorized between all first class post offices. Size limitations are now 72 inches in combined girth and length.

The next increase, on July 1, 1968, will raise the weight limit to 30 pounds. July 1, 1969, the weight limit will be increased from 30 to 40 pounds; on July 1, 1970, the size will be increased to 78 inches; and on July 1, 1971, the size is scheduled to be increased to 84 inches.

Postmaster Stader also reminded mailers that parcels weighing up to 40 pounds can be mailed between first class post offices less than 150 miles apart. Packages addressed to and from 2nd, 3rd, and 4th class post offices, Alaska and Hawaii are not affected by the increase in size and weight provisions of the Public Law 89-573, which became effective January 1, he said. Parcel post mailings to and from these offices remain at 70 pounds and 100 inches.

With the 4th of July coming up next week, perhaps the following history of our national anthem, "The Star Spangled Banner," will be apropos:

Our national anthem is a poem inspired by a battle. It is also the story of that battle, the Battle of Baltimore, fought in September, 1814, when a British fleet and infantry force tried to capture the city. How the poem came to be written and how it became the national anthem of the United States should be known to everyone.

In August, 1814, the British captured Washington. In returning to their ships, they passed through Upper Marlboro, Maryland, where they made a prisoner of Dr. William Beanes, an elderly and respected physician. They accused him of unfriendly acts toward British soldiers.

Francis Scott Key, a lawyer and friend of Dr. Beanes, obtained President James Madison's permission to visit the enemy fleet and ask for the doctor's release. Under a flag of truce, Key sailed aboard a small boat with John S. Skinner, the American agent for exchanging prisoners with the British. Down the Chesapeake Bay, near the mouth of the Potomac River, Key found the enemy fleet. The British promised to free Dr. Beanes, however, since they were going to attack Baltimore in a few days, they would allow no one to go ashore.

Landing at North Point, near the mouth of the Patapsco River, 12 miles from Baltimore, the enemy found General John Stricker's militia force barring their way. American sharpshooters killed General Ross, the British commander, and a brisk battle followed. The Americans were compelled to retire a short distance, but the invaders made no further attack. Stricker then withdrew to the main defenses, the high land east of Baltimore, near Patterson Park. The next day, September 13, the British moved close to the city but dared not attack the strong and well-manned defenses. Instead they asked the commander of the fleet to bombard Fort Mchenry, the main defense of Baltimore harbor.

For 25 hours, the British vessels poured shells, rockets and solid shot upon the Fort. The defenders fired in return, but their guns were not powerful enough to reach the British fleet.

Before the bombardment began, Francis Scott Key and the other Americans were placed aboard their small sailing ship under guard. All day and all night, while the furious bombardment continued, they watched the battle. During the night the guns were silent for a time, and they feared that the Fort had surrendered. To their great relief, dawn showed the American flag still flying proudly over Fort Mchenry. The British fleet prepared to withdraw. The guards were ordered to their own ships, and the Americans were free. Baltimore had been saved.

Overwhelmed with relief and joy, Francis Scott Key began to jot down some of his thoughts. What was to be the national anthem began to take shape in his mind. When the party reached Baltimore, Key lost no time in writing out in full the poem known as "The Star Spangled Banner," soon it was being sung to an old tune called "Anacreon in Heaven."

Slowly growing in popularity, "The Star Spangled Banner" became our unofficial national anthem long before 1931 when Congress passed a bill making it official.

"The Star Spangled Banner" is the story of Key's anxious vigil during the night of September 13-14, 1814. But, more than that, it tells us how the poet felt when his country was in danger, when his friends were under fire, and the future was at stake. It is our country's song of faith, trust and belief in the peaceful future of all mankind.

The manuscript, completed by Key on September 14, 1814, came into possession of the late Henry Walters, art collector of Baltimore. When Mr. Walters died in 1931, he left his art gallery to the city of Baltimore. The manuscript, however, as a part of his personal estate, was offered at auction in 1933 and acquired by the trustees of the Walters Art Gallery to keep in Baltimore. In 1953, by arrangement with the trustees of the Gallery, it was purchased by the Maryland Historical Society for the sum of $26,400, the amount given for it in 1933. Mrs. Thomas C. Jenkins donated the entire cost of the manuscript and of the marble niche in which it is installed, as a memorial to her late husband's mother, Catherine Key Jenkins, a cousin of Francis Scott Key.

Jimmy Duggan has submitted his copy of the song, "Where the Raritan Gently Flows", by J. J. Kenah, and as soon as a copy of the music can be made (one that can be photographed) it will be run in this column. Jimmy tells me that Kenah was in charge of the cloakroom of the House of Representatives during the time of the late Congressman Thomas Scully and that he, Kenah, had his song played by the famous Marine Band during one of their concerts. The date on the manuscript is 1910.

Garden News

YOUR YEAR FOR A RIBBON?

This may be the year for you to make the scene at a flower show.

Collecting ribbons and trophies can put a lot of extra fun in gardening, and if you've never entered blooms of your own in a show, just keep telling yourself that you have to start sometime.

You can come closer to taking home a ribbon or two in your first try if you first bone up on the rules of the show and find out what a judge looks for when he scores entries.

Don Lacey, Rutgers home horticulture specialist often quoted in this column, is also an experienced flower show judge. He has prepared these suggestions especially for first-time exhibitors:

TO BE A WINNER . . .

Get a show catalog or premium list and study the requirements of the classes you would like to enter. The first thing a judge does is to check to see if an entry meets requirements.

* Uniformity ranks high with a judge. Try to select blooms that are the same size, age, and color, too, if possible.

* Enter only the flowers that have no insect, or disease damage or any that have had too much sun or have been hurt by fertilizer. They should be at the peak of their bloom.

* Condition your flowers before you take them to the show. This will help them last longer and stand up under conditions that often are far from ideal, such as heat inside a tent.

If you paste these suggestions in your old gardening straw hat and look at them once in a while, you're on your way.

One more hunch. Take along a few extra blooms as spares, in case some break or wilt on the way. But if the rule says one bloom, don't show your spares, too, hoping the judge will choose the best, because he surely won't.

WARM WATER FIRST

Whether you decide to enter a show or just want your cut flowers to last longer in your home, Lacey's suggestion for conditioning may need a little more explaining.

He recommends cutting flowers the night before. Not an hour or two before show time. This gives them time to revive if they are inclined to wilt.

Put the newly cut flowers in a container of lukewarm water. This helps the stems take the water up faster. As the water cools, put the container of flowers in a cool place.

Flowers usually wilt because the water vessels in the stems are clogged with air bubbles. Just cut an inch off the bottom of the stem, and make your cut under water so no more air can enter.

There's no such thing as a loser at a flower show because everybody gets a little more education and can profit from the opinion and advice of the judges and friendly competitors.

John Wayne is the gunfighter and Robert Mitchum is the sheriff in Howard Hawks' "EL DORADO," in color, which is the feature now playing with the comedy hit "NOT WITH MY WIFE, YOU DON'T," also in color, starring Tony Curtis, Virna Lisi and George C. Scott at Loew's "35" Drive-In Theatre.

"EL DORADO," a big, colorful film, full of action, sex, humor and all the other ingredients one always hopes to find in a rousing outdoor adventure yarn, is set in Texas in the perfect era for tumultuous western adventure -- the period following the Civil War when the cattle market was beginning to emerge and when empire builders and gunfighters were governed by greed and desire for power.

"NOT WITH MY WIFE YOU DON'T" is about a pair of Air Force buddies who compete in the air for glory and on the ground for all the available women. The action and fun are fast and furious with no hold barred.

Federal Tax Facts

Refunds on 1966 Federal income tax returns totalling $244 million have been issued to more than 1 1/2 million New Jersey taxpayers. More than 90% of all returns requesting refunds by New Jersey residents have already been processed and refunds mailed.

However, some New Jersey taxpayers awaiting refunds have been notified that their returns would be audited before refunds were issued. Tax returns are usually selected for pre-refund audit because the refund claim is large or because an exceptional amount is listed as a deduction.

The first notice that a taxpayer receives is a letter which states, "Your income tax return on which you requested a refund has been selected for an examination." It tells the taxpayer that additional or substantiating information on one or more items reported on his return will be requested at a later date. It asks that no further action be taken until the taxpayer receives a second letter.

This second letter specifies the additional information needed to complete the audit through correspondence. Ordinarily it requests that the taxpayer send cancelled checks, receipted bills or other evidence to support a particular deduction or it includes a questionnaire to be completed and returned. Taxpayers should read this second letter carefully and follow its instructions as closely as possible. Information should be submitted within 15 days in the envelope supplied with the request.

Taxpayers with further questions on examination of their returns will find most of their answers in Document 5202, "If Your Return is Examined". It is free at any IRS office.

Congratulations to JO-TOM'S Little League Baseball Team who tasted their first victory of the season by a score of 7-1. The players were treated royally by the team's sponsor.

Congratulations to Frank Kapica who finally passed his driver's test this week. It was a hard struggle, but he finally made it!

Lou Tedesco, who left last month on a 3-week tour of Europe, became so enchanted with new and familiar places, he extended his stay, and last heard from, he was atop the Eiffel Tower, viewing the Paris scene. We expect he'll be home soon with many interesting tales to tell!

A little belatedly, we mention the note received from railroad buff Edward F. Erickson, about the steam railroad safari held last Sunday that passed through town on its way to Bridgeton. Mr. Erickson noted that it was probably 10 years since a steam engine had passed through town and this sentimental journey was the route followed by the Central's Blue Comet which used to make the run from Jersey City to Atlantic City. We know there were a score of East of Broadways out with cameras trying to get shots and that distinctive whistle could be heard clear across to Perth Amboy! Interested rail buffs might contact the High Iron Co. in North Plainfield on future similar affairs.

For children

Smokey-pokey proves not so pokey, after all

Written and illustrated by Carol J. Waugh

Ding-ding-ding sounded the bell of the crossing signal while two red lights flashed. Chug-chug-chug went the little switch engine across the busy highway. Trucks and automobiles stopped and waited as the engine pulled a long string of gondola cars behind her.

"There goes old Smokey-Pokey again," grumbled several people as they waited. Finally the last gondola crossed the highway and the trucks and automobiles could go.

"Good-by," waved some children. They hadn't minded waiting. They liked to watch the little engine work.

Engineer Bill waved back and Smokey-Pokey gave a "toot-toot!" Slowly and steadily she went along the tracks towing the heavy gondolas to a siding where they would wait to join a freight train.

Suddenly she heard a sound in the distance. Honk-h-o-n-k! Honk-h-o-n-k! Far down the tracks something bright appeared. Closer and closer it came, gliding swiftly over the rails. Then, whoosh!—a great shining train raced by. It was the streamliner, Silver Streak.

The dusty little engine could not help wishing that she, too, might speed away to distant places.

Well, never mind, thought Smokey-Pokey. This was no time to dream. She had work to do.

Engineer Bill said, "Let's go," and the little engine gave a ready "toot-toot!" Even if she could go only to the gravel pits she would try to be the most dependable little switch engine she knew how to be.

For many weeks Smokey-Pokey worked diligently. When the hot sun blazed she chugged back and forth in her steady way. When wintry winds blew and it rained she bustled along cheerfully. Always she was kept busy pulling gondolas; never did she go far from home. And each time that she saw the Silver Streak zoom by, she wished that she, too, might go on a long important journey.

Then, one wet, blustery day, a switchman named Joe flagged down Smokey-Pokey and Engineer Bill.

"There's been a big slide in the mountains," Joe shouted. "Too much snow! Tracks are covered and the snowplow has broken down. The Silver Streak is stalled with a load of passengers and we need your help!"

"Sure thing," said Bill. "What can we do?" "You can hitch on some old coaches and a caboose and take a work party up to the mountains," replied Joe.

To the mountains! Smokey-Pokey gave a gleeful loud toot! At last she was going on a real journey. She hurried down the tracks to couple on the coaches and caboose. At a signal from the brakeman she started up—chug-chug-chug—slow and steady.

"Come on, old friend," said Bill. "You can go faster than this." He pulled out the throttle. Soon Smokey-Pokey was going faster—chuggety-chug, chuggety-chug! She had never gone so smoothly and swiftly. Trees, houses, barns, horses and cows seemed to fly by as she sped through the valley. With no heavy gondolas to pull she found that she was not such a slow engine after all.

"Look at Smokey-Pokey go now!" shouted some children.

"Toot-toot! Toot-toot! Watch out ahead!" she whistled as she raced along. Presently she came to a steep mountain grade. Instead of chuggety-chug, she began to go chug-chug again, and then ch-u-ug—ch-u-ug. The rain became snow and the tracks were slick and cold.

At last she came to the place where the snow slide covered the tracks. Beyond was the Silver Streak. Men in the work party dug and shoveled a path to the stalled streamliner. Then the passengers were led to the place where Smokey-Pokey and her empty coaches were waiting. Everyone climbed aboard and the little engine started back down the mountain. Chuggety-chug, chuggety-chug! It was easy going down hill and Smokey-Pokey could look about at the beautiful trees, rugged rocks and sparkling streams.

"How fast this little engine is pulling us," said all the passengers. They were so glad to be rescued that they did not mind riding in the rattly old coaches.

When Smokey-Pokey came to the gravel pits in the valley she slowed down, wondering if she should stop.

"Come on," said Bill. "Let's take these folks all the way to the city. Smokey-Pokey gave a merry "toot-toot" and hurried on. In the city Engineer Bill guided her on.

"Thanks for the good ride!" said the passengers as they got off.

Smokey-Pokey turned around and started home. "Good-by, folks!" she whistled.

Next day she was at work pulling gondolas when she saw a bright gleam in the distance. Honk-h-o-n-k! came the blare of a horn. It was the Silver Streak on her way home from the mountains. "Hello-o-o-o!" she called to Smokey-Pokey as she went flashing past. "Good work, old friend. Thank you, thank you-oo-oo!"

Now when Smokey-Pokey pulls gondola cars across the highway she doesn't go chug-chug anymore. Remembering how well she went the day she rescued the snow-bound passengers she goes "chuggety-chug, chuggety-chug" just as briskly and as quickly as she can.

CAR DEALER

CAUTIONS DRIVERS

Daniel Zack, president of Briggs Chevrolet, said that with increased road traffic during the coming Fourth of July week-end, drivers should reconsider the following safe driving rules: Danger ahead! Drive carefully! The mounting highway carnage over week-end holidays CAN be reduced. You can do your part by simply exercising caution and by observing the fundamental rules of the highway.

Some of those rules: Allow yourself plenty of time to reach your destination. Observe the posted speed limits. If you feel tired en route, stop, walk a short distance, flex your muscles, rest your eyes, have a cup of coffee.

Give the other fellow the right of way. Don't cut in or out. Try to stay in one lane. Don't pass on a curve or a hill -- or on the wrong side. Be sure to signal for any turn. Stay a car-length behind the car ahead for each ten miles of your speed.

Stay off the wrong side of the road. Don't drive recklessly or take chances. Be sure your car is in good operating condition. And don't drive under any circumstances while under the influence of alcohol.

If you think all that is primary-school stuff, read on. Last year, motor vehicle accidents caused by violations of these rules-of-the-road were responsible for 44,600 deaths and almost four million personal injuries.

Please! Take it to heart. Enjoy your holiday. But enjoy it more completely by returning in one piece next Wednesday morning.
