City Brings Suit For Unauthorized Industry

City Attorney Clark Convery has filed suit in superior court on behalf of South Amboy against McCormack Terminal, Inc., Augusta Street, South Amboy.

Charged with several counts of air pollution, the suit orders McCormack to show cause why they should not be restrained "from causing various pollutants to be released into the atmosphere and from operating the business if it cannot prevent the emission of such pollutants into the atmosphere."

McCormack has been charged with five counts of air pollution by the Central Jersey Regional Air Pollution Control for the spread of coal dust into the air. McCormack representatives had been scheduled to appear in municipal court earlier, but have thus far failed to appear.

The pollution control agency has ordered McCormack to make changes on their equipment to cut down on the coal dust emissions.

While in the midst of conversion from a sand company to a coal port in year, McCormack officials discussed with the Council the use of a special detergent that would adhere to dust particles and make them heavier, thus limiting the black soot. At that time McCormack spokesmen vowed to respect the newly adopted noise ordinance and try to limit their activities to such times that would be least bothersome to neighbors.

This was not the case, however, as the Council began receiving complaints and, with each violation the group of dissatisfied neighbors grew.

The group has been successful in bringing their plight to public attention and has now garnered even more support.

The coal distribution company has been additionally charged by the Environmental Protection Agency with failing to procure the necessary operating permits for the use of the conveyor belts. This hearing will be held before the Department of Environmental Protection.

The city, too, has twice cited McCormack for excessive noise at specific times and levels according to the noise ordinance adopted last year.

All avenues will be pursued until residents can again lead more peaceful lives, the group said.

Coal, Noise Pollution Testimony Sought

Councilman Robert Noble Tuesday night requested the more than one dozen neighbors of McCormack to not openly discuss McCormack and the problems surrounding the coal company for fear of jeopardizing the civil action filed earlier that day.

While saying he was "not at liberty" to discuss the continued problems with the residents, Noble did say all those who wanted to submit an affidavit to the court concerning McCormack activities should do so on Monday, October 26, at 6:30 in City Hall.

Vincent Mackiel, Augusta Street resident, took exception to the request by Noble, saying as a citizen he felt he had every right to comment on the continuing dust storms and noise levels from McCormack, and did just that.

"The dates always seem to change," Mackiel said of the elusive court dates.

Councilman Noble again cautioned all those with complaints and requested they come before City Attorney Clark Convery and himself on October 26, and advised Mackiel the court date set for the suit hearing was November 20, 1981.

Noble also promised to look into the postponed municipal court charges and will ask for these matters to be disposed of as soon as possible.

Hospital Director Elected President Of Academy

Eugene J. Nieto, FAAMA, Executive Director of South Amboy Memorial Hospital and Community Mental Health Center, has been elected and installed as President of the American Academy of Medical Administrators. He will serve as President for a period of two years.

The American Academy of Medical Administrators, a professional organization of health care management throughout the country, is dedicated to developing innovative concepts in the field of health care administration and to the promotion and advancement of its members in knowledge, professional standing, and personal endeavors. This is obtained through education and research in management, administration and the philosophy of health care.

Nieto, who served as Academy Director for an area encompassing the State of New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania and Washington, D.C., also served as President-Elect since 1980. He is a member of the American Public Health Association, the American College of Hospital Administrators, and is a Fellow of the Royal Society of Health, in London. His association with the AAMA began in 1971, and he has since served as Chairman for the Academy's Annual Convocation and is a member of the Long-Range Planning Committee. In 1976, Eugene J. Nieto was honored as the AAMA

"Regional Director of the Year." A native of Brooklyn, New York, Mr. Nieto is a graduate of the University of Mississippi. He was also a member of the Central Jersey Health Planning Council, Inc.

In accepting the Presidential leadership role at a national conference of the Academy, he reiterated the philosophy of this professional association of health care leaders: "We believe health services management should provide an environment for delivering with dignity and human concern the maximum level of patient care."

"We believe in a system of health services management which includes components such as voluntary non-profit organizations, investor-owned organizations and national health services. We believe service to our membership is our central focus and we should provide services that meet the individual needs of our affiliates."

Movement To Open Ramp Gains Momentum

A petition bearing 400 signatures was handed Council by Classic Car Wash co-owner Chuck Kaciupsky asking for the reopening of the Washington Road ramp.

An access to Route 9 and 35 south, the ramp was torn up and blocked off last month as part of the reconstruction of Route 9.

Kaciupsky and his friend and partner James P. Hicks, now have even more at stake than before. Kaciupsky admitted he did not think earlier the ramp closing would present problems for his hand car wash enterprise, but he was premature in this assumption.

"My customers can't find Raritan Street, they are irate over existing conditions, and will no longer bother to go out of their way," he told the Council Monday night.

Among Kaciupsky's complaints is the shortening of the entrance way into businesses along Route 35. According to him, motorists do not obey the posted speed limit sign of 35 MPH, and whiz by at incredible speeds, leaving open the possibility of a rear-end collision with a customer slowing down to turn into the car wash.

DOT officials contend all the work on Routes 9 and 35 is geared toward making the roadway safer and cutting down on the number of accidents entails the permanent closing of this particular ramp.

This area, DOT records show is the fourth highest in the percentage of accidents in the state.

"There has been an 80 percent decrease in accidents," Kaciupsky cited his own investigations, "since the paving of the ramp two years ago this very month. With all the dollars being spent why not modify the ramp instead of eliminating it all together?"

Councilman Richard J. Schultz was sympathetic and

Norek Charges Money Mismanagement

John Norek, George Street, has charged the Mayor and City Council with allowing the city treasury to dwindle to a "bare bones" state, saying he believed the city's cash was not properly invested due to poor management.

Norek read figures which showed a sizeable amount of certificates of deposit purchased in January and February of this year, with no purchases made in March, April, or May. Yet, he said, the city borrowed $1,375,000, purchased CD's in June, and paid out $750,000 in July. "It is not sound money management," Norek charged.

"I can find no record of the council authorizing the borrowing of such a large amount of money," Norek told Council. "Can the City Treasurer just walk into a bank and borrow that kind of dollars without the Mayor and Council knowing of it?"

Council President Frank Tarallo corrected John Norek, saying the council passed a resolution to borrow the money, and that resolution certainly was part of the record of Council proceedings.

Business Administrator Nicholas Smolney explained many communities use the procedure to borrow money, invest in CD's, and earn interest until the bills come due "it's sound financial practice," Smolney said.

Norek also questioned what appeared to be an uneven cash flow, asking what caused huge expenditures one month, and a surplus in CD's the next. He also asked where the money was paid out.

Smolney, who told the George Street resident his figures were open to some question, replied, "Historically, the City follows the same trend every year and has done so even before my time of showing a surplus at the start of the year, then wanes in the third and ninth months to improve again at year's end."

Saying expenditures within the City was "fairly uniform," Smolney cited four tax appeals the city must repay, the largest being to Jersey Central Power and Light in the total amount of $300,000. He also said the county bills are pegged to a schedule while the Board of Education, though not consistent, must meet payrolls and other expenses that require a chunk of money.

"These payments occur in a period when cash flow is restricted," Smolney told Norek.

Norek also questioned where the $375,000 was borrowed from. Smolney replied it was from Amboy-Madison, where some of the money then gained interest in CD's before being used to meet the City's bills.

Council President Frank Tarallo also suggested that Norek leave a list of his questions to allow the Administrator and Treasurer to fully answer all his questions, which Norek did not do.

Special Mass For Area Sick

South Amboy's St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church will hold a special Mass for all the sick of the area.

This Mass will be celebrated on Sunday, October 25, at 1:15 p.m. at St. Mary's, Augusta Street. The Mass will be signed for the hearing impaired, and those who qualify will receive the sacrament of Anointing within the Mass.

All those who would like to receive prayer support for any need, physical, emotional, or spiritual, are invited to the Mass and asked to stay after Mass to join in group prayer.

Light refreshments will be provided by the C.Y.O. in St. Patrick's Hall.

The South Amboy First Aid Squad and individual volunteers have offered to help with transportation for those who need assistance. Anyone wishing to offer their services or anyone who needs help to attend the Mass should call Marty Kay at 721-0887.

Truck Repairs Weighed Against New Purchase

The Council must weigh the expense of refurbishing the Progressive fire truck at a cost of $70,000 against the purchase of a new truck at approximately $110,000.

A delegation of eight members from Progressive, including Fire Marshall Chester Meinzer, Ex-Chief Donnelly, and Second Assistant Chief William Hawes told Council members they felt a new truck would be needed within the next two years.

"At this point our present truck repair bills could be making payments on a new truck," spokesman Bob Vandenberg said.

Council President Frank Tarallo reminded the firemen that last year they promised to look into refurbishing the truck and was anxious to hear the outcome since the budget could not now be extended to include a new truck.

The fire truck in question is a 1985 Mack with an open cab and a gasoline engine. Refurbishing plans call for new wheels, a new air system, new brakes, a conversion to a diesel engine, and a new transmission.

"We looked over a 1980 refurbished Mack truck last month in Wildwood, where we had an excellent opportunity to examine many types of vehicles. That company paid over $100,000 and they still have an old truck," Ex-Fire chief Donnelly said.

Councilman Richard Schultz, whose first response Monday evening was to deny the truck, saying the Council could not see how they could justify the expenditure, but, on reviewing the cost of rebuilding the truck, revised his opinion, saying it would be ridiculous to spend $70-$80 thousand as opposed to an additional $30,000 for a new truck.

Vandenberg explained to those present a new truck would have to be specially ordered, as the building could only accommodate a truck less than 98 inches high, that being the doorway height.

Vandenberg explained the company has inspected several companies that produce firetrucks, and Progressive finds the Pierce, from Wisconsin, manufacturer superior in workmanship and quality; far better than Mack, who, according to the firehouse representatives, no longer manufacture parts for the '65 Mack.

"We can't get parts from Mack," Vandenberg complained. "Twice we have gotten parts from a junk yard in Newark, and once had to get a part from Viking's Boat Marina."

City Business Administrator Nicholas Smolney said it would be premature to say money would be available, but that the decision must come during the budget process.

Councilman Robert Noble suggested the company obtain a firm up figure on the new truck and a decision on financing would be made in February or March during the budget making process.

Mr. Malasiewicz originally opened up a bakery on Center Street, Bridgeport, Pennsylvania, in a section called "Swedesburg", about 1915.

He later moved his business to Newark, N.J. Another interim relocation was at the corner of Ridgeway Avenue and Raritan Street, where he sold his baked products for about three years.

On February 20, 1927, he and his wife had a grand opening at 109 No. Feltus Street where the bakery thrived until 1946.

The bakery on Feltus Street was built on property purchased from Charles Safran, who also owned extensive property in and around South Amboy, much of it inherited from his adoptive father Henry Wolf.

The Wolfs and Safrans lived in a large home now standing on the Sacred Heart Church parking lot. They ran a large general merchandise store with pneumatic change service between departments. The store was situated across the street from their home, now used as a dress factory.

The Malasiewicz family used a horse and buggy in earlier years. They had several daughters, eventually, to help them bake and run their store, including Adele, Jennie, Lottie, Mary, and Claire.

One of their big sellers was a delicious sour rye bread. Another loaf of bread was the pumpernickel variety which Poles in the area call "razowy" bread.

But their specialty and best seller was the spiced Washington pie baked on large trays and cut in sections that sold at twenty cents a dozen. A dozen such sections weighed about five pounds. People bought several dozen at a time.

Former customers may recall the "punczki" that sold at twenty-five cents a dozen at the onset of the Lenten season each year, filled with prunes inside and very tasty.

Mr. Malasiewicz, a very gentle and mild-mannered person, died in 1948. His wife Frances, also possessing fine features of personality, passed away in 1956.

Rose Ann is a graduate of St. Mary's High School, South Amboy, and is employed by Foodtown, here in the city.

Daniel is a graduate of Hoffman High School, South Amboy, and is employed by Cooperheat, Rahway.

The couple plans a July, 1982 wedding at St. Mary's Church, South Amboy.

Cross Endorses Weiss-Led Legislative Team

South Amboy Mayor J. Thomas Cross had high words of praise for the District 19 legislative team led by Senator Laurence S. Weiss.

"Senator Weiss, backed up by Assemblymen Alan Karcher and George Otlowski, have been most productive and helpful to the interests of the people of South Amboy."

"In the field of financial assistance alone, the figures speak for themselves. For the calendar year 1981, the sum total of supportive municipal aid monies received from the State by the City of South Amboy came to $3,682,098, plus $611,922 for school aid, and $454,643 for Homestead rebate, senior citizens and veterans deductions."

"This is more than three times comparable amounts we received for the last available report period," Mayor Cross said.

Mayor Cross said that a large portion of the municipal aid boost came by way of the Public Utility Franchise Tax, that was the subject of much controversy.

"This did not happen of itself. It was fought for successfully by Larry Weiss in the Senate and Alan Karcher and George Otlowski in the Assembly and they held the line on this action until our interests were fairly dealt with."

"For this we owe the Weiss, Karcher, and Otlowski team our deepest gratitude. More than that, we owe them our votes on Election Day."

"We like what we have and we want more of the same". Mayor Cross said as he indicated that the three incumbent legislators have always made themselves available for assistance with respect to local problems.

"Whether it was a matter of poor highway construction, delayed action with regard to bridge repairs or anything else, Senator Weiss and his associates Alan Karcher and George Otlowski in the Assembly were available to us in our dealings with the various departments of the State."

"And we usually came out ahead", Mayor Cross said, as he called for a strong Election Day turnout and heavy voting in behalf of Senator Weiss and Assemblymen Alan Karcher and George Otlowski.

United Methodist Church News

Faithful members and friends of The United Methodist Church of South Amboy, Frank Avenue, the Oak Tree Village section, Sayreville, will offer their thanks to God's goodness and mercy during worship, Sunday, October 25th. The church provides two opportunities for its members and constituents to gather for worship: 8:30 and 11 a.m. A complete Church School is provided at 9:45 a.m. Classes for children 3 years of age through adults are available. Beginning on Sunday, October 25th, a new Adult Study will be offered. This will be a United Methodist Class for those Senior High Youth and Adults seeking to unite with the fellowship of the church through profession of faith or by transfer. Adults who are currently members may also participate in the class as an opportunity to grow in their understanding of the Christian faith as lived by United Methodists.

The theme of the message to be presented is "The Gospel Incarnate." When Jesus was asked about the great commandment, he replied: "You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your mind. This is the great and first commandment. And a second is like it, You shall love your neighbor as yourself. On these two commandments depend all the law and the prophets." These words, coupled with the readings from Exodus and Thessalonians, provide the framework for what might be the faith understanding of allowing God's good news to come alive in the actions of those who claim its blessings.

Persons from the area served by this United Methodist Church who are seeking a church home in which to express their commitments to God are invited to participate with us in our programs of worship, study, fellowship, and outreach.

On the Church Calendar for the week of October 25th are: Tuesday, 10 a.m., Bazaar Workshop and 8 p.m., Committee on Finance; Wednesday, 11:30 a.m., the Dependable Circle and 7:30 p.m., Sanctuary Choir rehearsal; and Thursday, 8 p.m., final session of the Adult Study of Genesis. Members of the congregation are also reminded of the Family/Fellowship Activity to be held on Saturday, October 24th, 6-8 p.m.

stated he was of the opinion the ramp was not as dangerous as DOT figures report.

"The just ripped up the cement and left it without first letting us know what they were about," Schultz was annoyed at not having received word beforehand of the breaking up of the ramp.

Kacupsky believes proper signs and perhaps blinking lights would have improved the ramp and made it safer still. "I can put up with all this, but my customers won't, and now we have strangers, (DOT), come and take away a part of this community. It is going to be more difficult to get back," he said.

Calling the blocking of the ramp a detriment, Councilman Robert Noble is of the opinion the Route 9 and A construction catered to citizens in Monmouth and Ocean counties. "We've suffered," he said. "Sayreville has many arteries and I think an excellent point is that light and a sign would have worked well and been less expensive." Noble is also concerned about the uninterrupted traffic flow into the City by way of Main Street.

This being an election year, Freeholder Crabiel, Assemblymen Karcher and Otowski, with Senator Weiss have all expressed interest in the car wash owner's problem as well as Sonia Feinberg.

In the meantime Councilman Thomas O'Brien reported a number of communications had been sent to DOT, but would once again send another letter of protest over the dismantling and closing of the ramp.

An afternoon workshop on "mainstreaming" is also scheduled for instructors. Arrangement for both programs were made by Sandra Haber, Learning Consultant, South Amboy Board of Education and Toba Noble of the Central Educational Improvement Center in Princeton.

Can Art Inspire Social Change?

Like lines in a punched out poem the words were written large on newsprint tacked to the long white classroom wall. It was the first week of fall classes at the Mason Gross School of the Arts at Rutgers University, and Melvin Edwards was giving his sculpture students the basic vocabulary of his art form.

It wasn't an ordinary classroom nor an ordinary teacher. The man who shares his love of the three dimensional in this bare, plaster-strewn basement is a gentle revolutionary.

Not only an instructor of fledgling artists, Mel Edwards educates the public as well through his powerful abstract welded steel images.

An Afro-American, Edwards is profoundly influenced by that special dual identity. Deeply conscious of the racial oppression in this country and familiar with the land of his ancestors, he makes both visual and political statements with his art. Memories of his own friends and family also motivate him, so every image has several meanings.

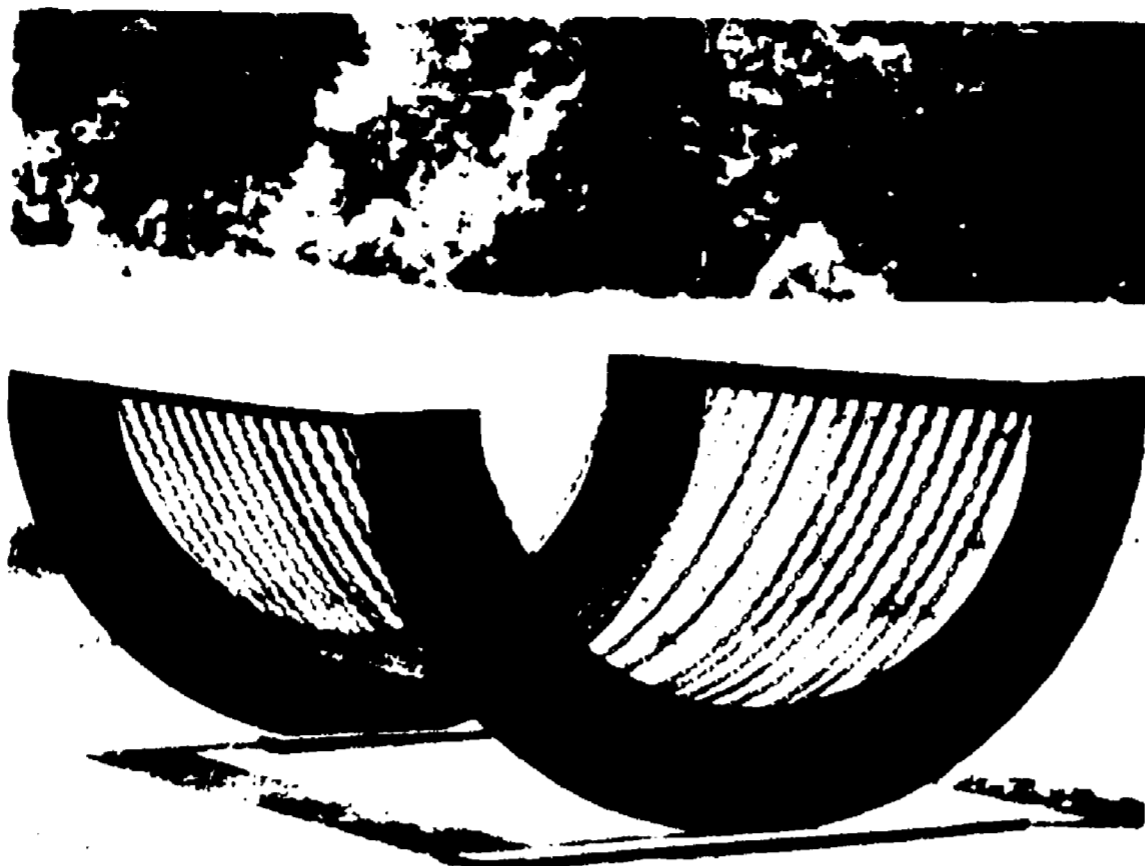

The work of black artists can inspire social change, Edwards believes; not only by providing images and themes of protest, but by asserting the presence of Afro-Americanism before the public. Effectiveness is heightened when it is known to blacks that an art work was made by a black, he says.

Edwards' Texas boyhood, in a close loving family, was followed by college in California. He studied painting at Los Angeles City College and L.A. County Art Institute, earning his bachelor of fine arts degree from the University of Southern California in 1966.

"I expected to become a painter," he confesses. "I thought that's what an 'artist' was. Then I saw someone working with steel. I tried it. I liked it. And I've never stopped."

Drawn to "the center of the art world," New York, in 1964, Edwards had a studio in Manhattan, then taught in Middletown, N.Y., and is now in his 10th year at New Jersey's State University.

In addition to sculpture, Edwards teaches a class in Third World Artists at Rutgers Livingston College, where he served for three years as chairperson of the department of art. At his current studio in Plainfield, he is working on a 30-foot-high stainless steel sculpture commissioned for the Mt. Vernon Plaza in Columbus, Ohio. His next exhibit will be in November at the State University of New York in Binghamton.

Childhood memories of his grandmother's rocking chair were translated into welded steel and chain for "Coco," a kinetic sculpture by Rutgers University professor Mel Edwards, an Afro-American who makes both visual and political statements with his art.

Edwards has earned an international reputation through many one-artist shows at such museums as the Whitney in New York, The Walker Art Center in Minneapolis and the Santa Barbara Museum of Art in California. His art has also been included in several dozen group exhibitions in such prestigious places as the Museum of Modern Art and as far away as Nigeria. In fall 1980 an exhibition of his work was shown at American culture centers in Kenya and Zambia.

The artist's highly developed consciousness of African art profoundly affects some of his best work. The connectedness that is part of his heritage was intensified during many visits to Africa since 1970. Working closely with an African architect, Edwards saw how the free flowing but articulated spaces of traditional village compounds were translated into contemporary urban architecture. The sculptor has lectured in Africa and established close relationships with some of the best carvers, metal workers and painters there.

For Edwards, his art is his way of expressing "the revolutionary change necessary for a positive world humanism."

In "Homage to Billie Holiday and the Young Ones of Soweto" (1976-77), free curves play against architectural features, with cast shadows connecting separate but inter-related units. The use of huge flat circles pierced by arches and doorways and supported by triangular wedges is recurrent in his work.

A change in viewing angle can create an entirely new experience. Many of Edwards' works are flexible in design, allowing alteration to fit varied installations.

Smaller works, such as "Lynch Fragments", are wall pieces incorporating barbed wire, chain, knives and other found objects conveying brutality. For others he welded horseshoes and tool and jack parts onto discs. Resembling totems, African masks or symbolic shields, the artist thinks of them as icons or fertility images, but never intends viewers to stop with a single interpretation.

From Africa, Edwards brought to his sculpture a sense of movement, both actual and implied. "Coco" (1970) and "Memories of Coco" (1980), inspired by his grandmother's old mission oak rocker, are kinetic pieces having the potential for a lumbering rocking motion. "Thelma" (1978), dedicated to his mother, is a non-rocking variant, suggesting motion.

Many of Edwards' works are dedicated to significant figures in black history. "Homage to the Poet Leon Gontran Damas" (1978) honors one of the fathers of the "Negritude" movement, a social, political and literary movement of black awareness.

An inverted arch, carefully placed 'stools', and a space-defining chain are elements in the work originally conceived for a low area on the ocean near the French Guiana home of the poet. Had the house been completed, the sculpture would have been installed so a viewer could watch the sunrise through the arch. After the poet's death, Edwards created the massive steel work in honor of his friend.

"Metaphorically speaking," Edwards explains, "I imagined the sun rising on his Negritude in Africa and setting in the forests of French Guiana."

There is much of history and black culture to be learned from Edwards' consciousness-raising art if observers will let it inspire them to "think", the sculptor maintains.

"My work is serious," he declares. "It has profound qualities."

"While appreciating what they see, people should think about it, too, and follow their thinking," he recommends. "They might do some research in the directions suggested by the work. They might learn something new. They might read the poet or learn more about a historical event or a problem that should be solved."

"Or maybe, it is just enough for the work to hold their interest out under a sunny sky," he muses with a grin.

'Making the Most of Maturity' Symposium Slated For October 28

The opportunities for enrichment of life for the elderly in today's society will be explored at a symposium entitled, "Making the Most of Maturity," on Wednesday, October 28, 1981, from 9:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. Jointly sponsored by the Concerned Committee for the Elderly, Raritan Bay Mental Health Center, and Middlesex County College, Edison.

Doris Havran, the keynote speaker, is president of Lutheran Church Women and has ten years experience as a hospital volunteer.

Workshops have been designed to cover a broad range of interests of our older citizens. In the morning the workshops will deal with the topics, "Using Your Medication Wisely," "Coping with Stress," and "Options for Long-term Care." After a break, during which coffee and doughnuts will be served, workshops will continue at 12:45 p.m. They will be concerned with "Legal Concerns of the Elderly," "Sex After Sixty," and a second workshop on "Techniques for Coping with Stress."

Following the workshops, there will be a short film about older people who are enjoying their lives, even as nursing home residents. The film is entitled, "What Do

You Want to be When You Grow Up?" Closing remarks will be made by Bonnie Nack, Ed.D., Director of Gerontology at the Raritan Bay Mental Health Center, and Eileen Kane, Director of Retirement Programs at Middlesex County College.

The symposium will be open to the public, and no admission fee will be charged.

Shut-Ins Honored

Shut-in members of the St. Stanislaus Kostka Parish were honored at a special Latin Mass at a 4:30 p.m. celebration at the Parish Church in Sayreville.

The Rev. Anthony M. Kramarz was principal celebrant and the Rev. Edward Wanat S.D.S., was concelebrant.

Noted Polish recording star, Jan Lewan, was guest soloist during the Mass.

During the Mass, the ceremony of the Anointing of the Sick was celebrated, followed by Benediction and a blessing for the shut-ins.

A dinner dance was later held in the parish auditorium. Each honored guest received a symbolic red rose from the Pastor Rev. Kramarz as he welcomed them. Jan Lewan again appeared in concert with a variety of Polish and English selections.

The Polka Star Dancers also provided entertainment. The evening of music and dancing also included music provided by the Bernie Goydich Orchestra.
