CONFERENCE ON "HOLE-IN-WALL"

Board of Freeholders and P. R. R. Officials Meet in This City Last Evening - Plans for Improvement Discussed - Railroad Wants to "Hole-in-Wall" and Build Overhead Bridge.

Following the long delayed conference between the Freeholders and the officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad, the "Hole-in-the-Wall" conference took place at that notorious place, the home of the members of the board of Freeholders were on hand. The company officials were Superintendent Victor Wierman, Acting General Superintendent Krick, Engineer McClellan, and T. and S. Agent W. Crane. This city was represented by Councilman William Parsons, of the street committee, and Engineer McMichael. County Engineer Fox was also on hand.

The conference opened County Engineer Fox acted as spokesman for the County authorities, stating that what they would like to have was a widening or doubling of the present tunnel, proper drainage and pavement suitable for present day travel, as well as relief of other objectionable conditions. The Railroad officials claimed that a private right of way built by some years ago was used as the "hole" highway and relieved the need of the tunnel under their tracks. They wanted to close the cause to maintain it would be with certain extensive improvements, which they had under consideration for location in this city. Freeholder Kerr contradicted the statement regarding the "Bumps Road" being an acceptable substitute for the Mechanicsville road and Mr. Fox then let it out that the commission was considering the establishment of an enormous freight terminal and that the elimination of the tunnel would decide the location of this city and Greenville, outside of Jersey City. offered to have his company overhead bridge from about two blocks above the tunnel over the tracks of the railroad and construct a roadway leading from the end of the bridge to the Fourth street, Stevens avenue and Alpine street, opening into Washington avenue. Upon completion this would be turned over to the county. The proposed structure was exhibited, which would permit of an extension of the present yard facilities several hundred feet. The conference ended with the railroad and county engineers agreeing to prepare estimates of cost for the hole outlined by each. Some time in the future there will be another meeting or conference at which another excuse of some sort for further delay will probably be formulated. Meantime the disgrace to the city, the county, and the state continues.

FIRE CAUSES $100 DAMAGE.

Last Sunday afternoon the fire department was called out to answer an alarm of fire in the home of Walter Langkusk of George street. The fire started in the front room from an oil stove. Quick action extinguished the blaze before any great amount of damage was done. The loss was rung about two o'clock. The building was owned by Peter Langkusk and was damaged to the amount of at least a hundred dollars.

WILL PAY DAMAGES.

John Martin, of Madison, was brought before Justice Mason last Tuesday by Special Officer J. J. Keenan, of the Pennsylvania Railroad detective force, on charge of damaging property of the company. The charges were dismissed when Martin offered to pay for the damage he had done while irresponsible as the result of imbibing too much fire water.

St. Patrick's Day Entertainment

Preparations for a fitting observance of Saint Patrick's Day have been fully completed. The celebration will take place in St. Mary's Hall, Friday, March 17, 1916, at eight o'clock.

Following the custom of previous years the Robert Emmet Dramatic Association has arranged with its ablest players for the production of a comedy entitled, "The Old New Hampshire Home." This masterpiece of the Thespian art has met with such unanimous approval wherever it has been produced that there can be no doubt of its success on the present occasion.

The play is divided into three acts which form the natural divisions of a well defined plot. The individual acts are well balanced, each portraying a series of episodes complete in themselves yet gradually converging to a successful climax and ending in a happy conclusion.

This close adherence to the rules of dramatic composition gives ample proof that it was written not, as are many of the comedies of the present day with a view to large returns in box-office receipts, but to afford real pleasure to those who witness the production.

But best of all the comedy is simply irresistible. Humorous situations follow each other in such close order that the audience has scarcely time to recover from one attack of side-splitting mirth before another incident is introduced to set the house in an uproar again.

Special scenery has been secured from the France Scenic Studios of New York City, which will add a fresh touch of color to the decoration of the hall and guarantee an accurate portrayal of the dramatic effects.

Between the acts musical selections will be given by persons of recognized worth supported by a full chorus of the best singers the city affords.

Immediately following the entertainment a very satisfactory supper will be served by the ladies of the parish. After this dancing will be in order until an early hour. Kerr's Orchestra will furnish the music.

The sale of seats has been unusually large and as tickets will not be sold in excess of the capacity of the hall it would be advisable to secure tickets as soon as possible.

FRANK DOMZEL.

After a lengthy illness Mr. Frank Domzel passed away at his home in Augusta street last Monday evening at the age of fifty-four. A widow and six children, four sons and two daughters survive.

A high mass of requiem was celebrated in Sacred Heart Church on Thursday morning at the funeral services. Interment was made in Sacred Heart cemetery. F. A. Maliszewski was funeral director.

For a number of years the deceased was employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad as a trimmer on the coalers in this city. He was still on the rolls when the Grim Reaper overtook him. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company's stage was used in the funeral procession, for which the bereaved family is duly appreciative.

MORE DELAY OVER

NATAWAN CREEK BRIDGE

There is no hope of completing the Strauss bascule lift type of bridge over Natawan Creek, on the Keyport-South Amboy road, before the middle of May. This information was gleaned Wednesday by the Board of Freeholders of Monmouth County. While plans were being made for building a new bridge early last fall the old bridge collapsed, and when the freeholders would have repaired the structure for temporary use, the United States War Department stepped in and insisted that the bridge be removed immediately. This was done, and traffic has been diverted several miles.

Contract was recently let to the F. R. Long-V. G. Broadhurst Company of Hackensack for the new structure, to cost in excess of $40,000. The firm reported Wednesday that delays are being experienced in securing structural steel parts. To hurry the matter along so far as possible the freeholders directed John M. Brawley of Spring Lake, supervising engineer on the job, to go to Chicago and Huntington, Ind., where the foundry and machine shop, respectively, are located.

A BRILLIANT SOCIAL EVENT

The Leap Year Reception Under Auspices of Several Young Ladies Was a Huge Success—Hall Neatly Decorated—Handsome Gowns Worn by the Ladies a Prominent Feature.

The Leap Year Reception held in the Knights of Pythias Hall Friday evening, March 3, scored a tremendous success in every way. The guests numbered about two hundred and among them were those prominent socially throughout the county.

The reception was given by a number of young ladies who are prominently identified with the social affairs of this city and a great amount of credit is due them for the huge success which their enterprise scored. The invitation list had evidently been carefully compiled with the result that a spirit of congeniality pervaded the atmosphere and added the finishing touch to an evening's delightful pleasure. With everyone so willingly friendly to everyone else the evening quickly passed and left nothing but pleasant memories.

The hall was tastefully decorated with soft blending of red and white streamers strung around the walls and draped from side to side of the dance floor. Even the electric lights were softly shaded with the same colors and the effect upon the variegated colors of the many elaborate and most beautiful costumes was decidedly pleasing to look upon. The stage was skillfully concealed behind a bank of screens and the entire result was unique and tasteful.

The appearance of the floor as the dancers swayed hither and yonder to the strains of the excellent music furnished by Westerfelt's Orchestra, of Newark, was a sight not soon to be forgotten. The beautiful gowns as well as the beauty of the wearers all contributed to the whole result.

The program was divided into two parts, each consisting of the popular dances of the day—the fox trot, the one-step, Paul Jones, the new waltz and a novelty dance. Of the latter there were two, the "Elimination" and the "Heart and Arrow." In the former each couple was given a heart with a number on. After dancing a few steps, numbers were called miscellaneous and the couples whose numbers corresponded dropped out of the dance. This was repeated until but a single couple remained, Miss Pauline Philo, of Perth Amboy, and Mr. Leo Hubbard. In appropriateness to the occasion the gentleman was awarded the prize which was a large box of candy.

The "Heart and Arrow" dance was a search for partners—matching the hearts and the arrows. They were numbered in pairs, the men having the hearts and the women the arrows, as is usually the case although not admittedly so. The matching for partners was a hilarious time. Several of the heart owners got afraid they were going to get left and gathered in the center of the floor shouting their number to enable their partner to find them with ease—sort of auctioning themselves off—taking no chances of being old—we almost said mads.

Dainty refreshments of punch and assorted French pastry also added to the evening's enjoyment.

The committee in charge of the arrangements for the most brilliant event of the season hereabouts were as follows: Miss Bertha S. Fulton, chairman; Henrietta Gundrum, Bertha Kaufman, Madge Mahoney, Kathryn Lyons, Cecelia Kaufman, Mae Costello, Antoinette Kerr, Josephine James, Gladys Emmons, Anna Scully. The list of patronesses included: Mrs. T. J. Scully, Mrs. Wm. S. Day, Mrs. John A. Coan, Mrs. A. J. Miller, Mrs. George Gundrum and Mrs. Samuel Newton.

The guests of honor were as follows: Mayor and Mrs. Wm. S. Day, Mr. and Mrs. George Gundrum, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Safran, Mr. and Mrs. James D. Van Pelt, Dr. and Mrs. E. A. Meacham, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Coan, Mr. and Mrs. Francis P. Coan, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred T. Kerr.

A brief description of the gowns worn by the ladies is given as follows:

Bolton With Lincoln Night He Was Shot

The readers of the "South Amboy Citizen" will perhaps recall an interesting article written by Captain John T. Bolton some years ago, in which he relates the important part he was called upon to perform the night that Lincoln was shot. Captain Bolton as Lieutenant of Prevost Guard was on duty at Ford's theatre the night in question, and was the first person to reach the side of the wounded President. Climbing upon the stage, he was lifted up into the private box. Realizing he was seriously, if not fatally injured, he had him carried to the room in which he died, and had charge of his body after death. Captain Bolton enlisted in his country's service as Sergeant of Company K, Middlesex County, New Jersey. It was at the battle of Fredericksburg he won distinction and was brevetted Lieutenant.

John Y. Foster, Historian for State of New Jersey in time of rebellion says, "Sergeant John T. Bolton of Middlesex County displaying great gallantry at Fredericksburg was made Lieutenant and did much to promote the efficiency of the company."

Captain Bolton is a man of sterling quality, a valuable citizen, one that his native state New Jersey, as well as Virginia, his home by adoption, can truly feel proud. Active in business and civic as well as church interests until stricken by apoplexy a couple of years ago, since which time he has been content to see the work fall on younger shoulders, while he is always willing to help with the advice that coming from his years of experience is most highly appreciated.

With his invalid wife he lives happily in their beautiful home overlooking the Elizabeth River at Norfolk, Va., and as he watches the great "War Dogs" glide softly by on their way to and from the Navy Yard, there comes a deep pleasure in the retrospect of the days when he could and did do his duty to his country.

Captain Bolton has a brother Mr. Amos G. Bolton living on Main street, South Amboy. Another brother Thomas Bolton who was with him at Fredericksburg, lives at Newark, N. J. A younger brother, Dr. Andrew C. Bolton, lives in Brooklyn, N. Y.

A SURPRISE PARTY.

On Friday evening of last week, a very pleasant surprise party was held at the home of Miss Modesta Kennedy of David street. Those present were:

THIS CITY HIGH IN COST PER PUPIL

According to Table Issued by County Superintendent It Costs More to Educate a Pupil in This City Than in Any District in County—Raritan Township Second Highest and South Brunswick Township Third.

From data issued in tabulated form by County Superintendent H. Brewster Willis, the cost of educating a pupil in this city last year was higher than in any other school district in the county. Based on an enrollment of 755 the average cost per pupil during 1914-1915 was $43.38 and based on the average daily attendance of 613 for the same period the cost per pupil increased to $53.42. Raritan Township was next to this city in cost of education per pupil with an enrollment of 712 and a per capita cost of $37.95. In the average cost based on the daily attendance of 501 amounted to $53.50 or a trifle above the rate in this city.

South Brunswick Township with an enrollment of 658 and average daily attendance of 455 spent $30.61 per pupil on the enrollment basis or $42.80 on the attendance basis. South River with an enrollment of 852 and an attendance of 701 average daily spent $30.12 per pupil enrolled and $36.70 per pupil based on the attendance records.

Perth Amboy, having the largest enrollment in the county, spends $26.08 per pupil enrolled and $32.16 per pupil in attendance. New Brunswick has next to the highest enrollment in the county, it being 3,913 with an average attendance of 3,140. The cost of a year's education in New Brunswick amounts to $30.91 per pupil enrolled and $38.42 per pupil in attendance.

Woodbridge has an enrollment of 2,119 and an average daily attendance of 1,595. The cost per pupil is $36.11 on enrollment basis and $47.87 per pupil in attendance.

The lowest costs for a year's education per pupil is found in Spotswood and Madison. In Spotswood the enrollment is 137 and the attendance 106. The cost per pupil enrolled is $23.04 and the cost per pupil average attendance is $29.56. In Madison the enrollment is 294 and the attendance average is 194. The costs are $22.23 and $29.55 respectively.

ENGINEERS BUSY AT "HOLE."

With the appearance of railroad engineers surveying the "Hole-in-the-Wall" and vicinity on Thursday it would look as though something might be done toward widening the tunnel in the not far distant future. The plans of the railroad would make the "hole" at least eight hundred or a thousand feet in length. This is of course after the contemplated extension of present yard facilities is made in connection with the proposed freight terminal here.

From several authoritative sources opinions have been secured which would indicate that widening the "hole" would be far the cheapest form of relief for conditions at that place. At the same time the consensus of opinion among the freeholders, county engineer and members of the common council of this city seems to be that the proposition of widening the present tunnel is not as impracticable as has been maintained in some quarters.

ADAM H. APPLIGATE.

Adam H. Applegate, eighty-two years old, died Tuesday night at his South River home. He had lived in South River practically all his life, being engaged in the grocery business there. He is survived by the following children: Charles Applegate of Orange, George Applegate and Mrs. William Gray of South River, and Mrs. Henry Miller of New Brunswick.

MRS. MARY BREEN.

Mrs. Mary Breen passed away at the home of John Lyons on Church street early Sunday morning at the age of eighty years. Funeral services were held from St. Mary's Church at 9 o'clock on Tuesday morning and interment made in St. Mary's cemetery. J. J. Scully was the funeral director in charge.

Long Branch Nationals This Friday Night

The referee's awarding the Riverside-Y. M. C. basketball game to the latter team last Tuesday night does not by any means settle the disputed championship of the county. The game was started on Parish House court and lasted until about the middle of the second half. A dispute ensued over a decision by Campbell which ended in the Rivies leaving the floor. The score at this time was 19 to 15 in favor of the champions but the score of the game, according to the technical ruling by the referee, was 2 to 0.

The honors of the game so far as it went were about even but it was evident from the start that there were too many men on the floor. Pete Campbell refereed and Thomas Cantlon was umpire. Neither official called any fouls on the team with which he was affiliated except in double fouls.

The officials did not seem inclined to give the teams any leeway for fast work which resulted in punk decisions in a number of cases.

The dispute which ended the game started when Campbell blew his whistle for a foul. Just as he blew Hornsby shot and made the basket. The referee said he blew in mistake and wanted to let the basket count and also allow a foul try. This the Rivies wouldn't permit and finally walked off the court.

The lineup of both teams was the same as in the game in the K. of P. Hall with the exception of Cantlon, who played forward in place of Grace. Nash, the big Rutgers star, was the spare man for the Rivies.

The Riverside management has issued a challenge for another game on a neutral court and with an outside official. In the game in the Parish House there should have been but one official and that an outside man. Then there could be no reasonable dispute of decisions or charges of partiality.

It is to be hoped that the championship dispute may soon be settled on a neutral court and that preferably a large one.

This Friday evening the Rivies will play the Long Branch Nationals. The latter team claims right to the championship of Monmouth County and questions the right of the Rivies claim to the championship of two counties. From the reputation of the Nationals and past performances the game here should be an interesting and exciting one.

BOWLING MATCH.

On Wednesday evening a bowling match between teams of the Cypress A. C. and Yacht Club took place on the latter's alleys. Cypress boys took two out of three games and won the match by good margin. F. Hoffman was high man for the Cypress A. C., making 211; and R. C. Stephenson was high for the Yacht Club making 194. A return match will be bowled on the Y. M. C. A. alleys.

RED MEN HAVE INITIATION.

Seneca Tribe No. 23, Imp'd. O. R. M., had a big time at their meeting Thursday evening. The new degree team gave its first exhibition. Visitors were present from several surrounding towns and boroughs.

Five new candidates were initiated into the order. They were: Walter McKenna, Alexander Westcott, Charles Grover, Thomas Kvist, and W. R. Peterson.

The degree team was recently organized and has been rehearsing for some little time. The work was exceptionally good and the ritual was even improved upon in some respects. The initiation ceremony was very impressive as a whole.

After the "doings" refreshments were served and some time pleasantly passed in pow-wowing and smoking the "peace-pipes."

SATURDAY, MARCH 11, 1916.

ORIGIN OF GOLD AND SILVER.

Steamboat Springs, Nevada, has figured prominently in discussions of the origin of ore deposits. The waters of these springs contain the precious metals in minute quantities, and the sinter deposited by them contains several minerals that are common constituents of ores, as well as small quantities of many of the rarer metallic constituents of ore deposits, including gold and silver. Such springs, therefore, suggest that many and perhaps most ore-bearing veins have been formed by hot water rising from great depths, which have brought their metal contents up in solution and deposited them in open spaces or fissures in the rocks through which the waters passed, the deposition of some ores being influenced by chemical reaction with the surrounding rock. Many ore deposits are undoubtedly formed in other ways, for some are unquestionably of sedimentary origin and the metal content of some others has been carried down, re-deposited, and concentrated by rain water that descended into the earth's crust, but the "hydrothermal" origin—that is, their deposition from ascending hot water—of many of the more valuable ore deposits is indicated by the close relation observed at many places between mineral veins and eruptive rocks. Thermal waters are believed to be, in part at least, given off by slowly cooling and solidifying masses of igneous rock (magma) deep within the earth. (U. S. Geological Survey.)

Belgian Congo.

Belgian Congo, founded thirty years ago, is still in the early stage of development. So far practically no manufacturing industries have yet been established, and, aside from the important copper mines in the Katanga district, the only large industrial enterprises are the railways and river transportation services. It may be said that all business activities in the colony are devoted to the collection of tropical products—rubber, ivory, gum copal, palm oil and kernels, cacao, etc.—and the railway and river services are in reality only accessories to these activities, having been established primarily to aid in the transportation of these products to the seaports. The gathering of rubber in Congo has never recovered its former activity, and in all probability will never again be so rich a source of income to the colony as it was previous to 1912.

Ship Money.

Charles I. was badly in need of money, and his attorney general in the course of his antiquarian researches discovered that in the dim ages of the past the crown had issued writs to the cities and towns on the coast requiring them to provide vessels for the royal needs, and he suggested that this ancient right might be brought into use again. Instead of the actual vessels a money contribution might be exacted instead. Thus the king would be able to tax a larger part of the realm while theoretically observing the laws. Writs for ship money were accordingly issued, but the patriot John Hampden declared that they were illegal and raised such a protest against them that they were practically nullified.

Weed Pests.

Of the 200 species of ferns native to this country a few have become more or less serious weed pests. The most troublesome are the lay scented fern and the brake. According to a bulletin of the department of agriculture, cutting off the tops close to the soil surface twice a year for two years will kill out nearly all ferns. The best times to do the cutting are just previous to spring, or about the middle of June, and the middle of August.

The Twins.

We have heard of several cases wherein twins have borne a remarkable likeness to each other. But the most curious was the case of twin sisters who had to be told everything together because it was impossible to tell them apart.

NEW JERSEY NEWS CONDENSED.

Items of Interest From all Parts of the State as Gleaned From Our Exchanges Briefly Paragraphed.

William D. Edwards.

Former State Senator William D. Edwards, one of the best known lawyers in the state, and an authority on municipal law and taxation, died suddenly from heart disease at his home, 2627 Boulevard, Jersey City, early Monday. His brother, Edward I. Edwards, is controller of New Jersey.

Mr. Edwards had been in failing health for a long time, but had managed to carry on his extensive practice. Thursday he was taken ill after a strenuous day in court, but it was believed his trouble was not serious. His death was not expected. Mr. Edwards is survived by his widow and seven brothers. Mrs. Edwards was at the bedside when the end came.

State Death Rate Lowest Last Year.

Semi-official tabulations, subject to correction in the checking-up process by the State Department of Health, indicate that the death rate for 1915 was the lowest in the history of New Jersey. These figures indicate that the total number of deaths for the year was 39,942, giving a death rate of 13.86 as against 14.02 for the preceding year, which had the lowest death rate up to that time.

Tabulations for January in the present year show a marked increase over the number of deaths for preceding months. The total number of deaths for January was 4,468, of which 4,439 were of residents. This would give a resident death rate of 18.48 for the month, the largest in the history of the state. The most marked increase occurred in the diseases of the respiratory system, the increase in pneumonia alone being 407 over the preceding month. This may be attributable in whole or in part to the epidemic of grip, which has been particularly productive of serious after effects, including pneumonia. There was also an increase of 236 in the number of deaths from diseases of the circulatory system.

"As for age periods an increase is shown," said the bulletin issued by the board, "for all ages, but the increase is more marked in the deaths of persons sixty years old and more, the increase for this age period being more than 400 as compared with the preceding month. It would seem from the data at hand that the high death rate for January was due in a large measure to the prevalence of acute respiratory diseases during that month."

Richard A. McCurdy.

Richard Aldrich McCurdy, who was president of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York when the revolution in the life insurance business was brought about by a series of investigations by a New York legislative committee in 1904 and 1905, died Monday morning at 2.45 o'clock at his home, 200 South street, Morristown. Mr. McCurdy Saturday night suffered an acute attack of heart trouble, with which he had been afflicted six years. He became unconscious Sunday morning and remained in that condition until his death.

Mr. McCurdy's company was one of the three, the investigation of which first brought Charles Evans Hughes to public notice in a large way, as a result of which he became successively Governor of New York and Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Born in New York City, January 29, 1835, the son of Robert H. McCurdy, Mr. McCurdy was graduated from the Harvard Law School in 1856 and practiced his profession in New York City with Lucius Robinson, afterward Governor of New York.

Asylum For Woman Who Poisoned Her Two Babies.

Mrs. Mabel Fields, twenty-four years old, of 2731 Sherman avenue, Camden, who killed her two small children with poison on November 21 and took some herself, has been pronounced insane. Prosecutor Kraft will make application before Judge Boyle to have Mrs. Fields committed to the asylum at Blackwood. She had been separated from her husband. The children poisoned were Frank, fourteen months old, and Mabel, three months old.

Writ Granted in Drawbridge Suit.

On Saturday last the Board of Freeholders of Middlesex County was granted a writ by Supreme Court.

review of the recent action of the Board of Utility Commissioners in finding that the responsibility for the maintenance of the canal draw-bridge at the foot of Albany street, New Brunswick, rested upon the county.

The writ was granted upon the application of George L. Burton, county solicitor. He sets forth that he applied for an order requiring either the Delaware & Raritan Canal Company or the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, lessees, to erect a new draw-bridge, and that the petition was dismissed by the Utility Commission on February 1.

It is asserted by Mr. Burton that either of the companies mentioned should maintain the draw and that the decision of the Utility Commission was illegal, unjust and against the weight of evidence in the case, with a resultant burden and obligation upon Middlesex county.

Death Summons Two Veterans.

Two deaths occurred Sunday at the Home for Disabled Soldiers in Kearny. Louis Helm of Jersey City succumbed at 2.45 o'clock in the afternoon and James T. Stackhouse of Trenton late in the evening. The former's death is attributed to paralytic dementia. He was eighty-five years old and admitted to the institution in August, 1900. He served in Company C, Seventy-eighth Regiment, and Company C, 102d Regiment, New York Volunteer Infantry. He was a native of Germany.

Mr. Stackhouse was quartermaster-sergeant of the 179th Pennsylvania Drafted Militia. He entered the institution in October, 1908. His death was caused by catarrhal enteritis.

Robbed Home and Gave Loot to His Fiancee.

Howard Smith, twenty-six years old, of Atlantic Highlands was held Sunday afternoon by Justice of the Peace Williams in $1,000 bail after he had confessed to robbing the summer home of the Misses Ivy and Hazel Troutman. His arrest came about through his gifts to his fiancee, living in Red Bank. They included much expensive clothing and silverware which Miss Hazel Troutman identified as belonging to her sister.

The robbery of the Troutman cottage occurred about a week ago and everything movable was taken. The police say Smith used a sleigh to take away his loot. Smith's fiancee, when told that the gifts she had been receiving were stolen, became hysterical. The clothing was unmarked and practically new. The girl never suspected that Smith obtained them in any way other than by purchase, she said. According to the police, Smith had a confederate in the robbery.

Dies When Almost 99.

Bartlett V. Clark, Rahway's oldest citizen, died Monday night at his home, 68 Commerce street, that city. Had Mr. Clark lived until May 2 he would have celebrated his ninety-ninth birthday. He was born in Chatham, came to Rahway in 1859 and conducted a boot and shoe business ten years ago. Mr. Clark for fifty years had been prominently identified with the city's interest. He was vice president of the Rahway Savings Institution. He is survived by a nephew, Albert B. Wilson, and a niece, Mrs. James McCullum.

Anthony Viehmann.

Anthony Viehmann of New Brunswick died Monday night of heart trouble. He had served as a member of the Board of Education and also of the Middlesex County freeholders. Born in Germany, Mr. Viehmann came to this country in 1864, and had lived in New Brunswick since 1867. He was a member of the German Reformed Church. Four children survive. They are former Mayor George A. Viehmann, Mrs. Estelle Pickard of Philadelphia and the Misses Louise and Bertha Viehmann of New Brunswick.

Record for Local Option.

George L. Record, Progressive Republican candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, has sent a letter to the clergymen of the state declaring that he will not only sign a local option bill like the Gaunt measure if passed but that if elected Governor he "will use the great power of the office to procure the passage of the bill."

"I am aware," writes Mr. Record, "that this is the first time any candidate for Governor has ever run on a local option platform, but I believe that the great majority of the Republican voters are in favor of local option, and I am satisfied that with a united effort centered on one candidate, among all the friends of this measure, we can carry the primaries and elect the Governor and the law can be passed at the next session of the Legislature."

Dr. James G. Mason, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Metuchen, who was the candidate of the Prohibition party for President in 1912, has written to Mr. Record commending him for his stand on local option, but urging him to go further and join the Prohibition party.

Church Fair Nets $6,500.

Over $6,500 was cleared at the Mardi Gras held at Columbia Hall, New Brunswick, by the parishioners of St. Peter's Church, which ended Tuesday when a reception was given to Monsignor John A. O'Grady. Monday night Miss Jessie Paul, who won the queen's contest, was crowned queen by the retiring queen, Miss Marie Francis, known as Queen Regina J. The church held the fête to secure $6,300 to pay off the debt.

WAR—WHY?

(By R. T. R.)

Why was this war given birth? Why are lives taken day after day? Why are armies trying to conquer the earth? And thus be it each day, Vows are broken, hearts are breaking.

All love's labor seems as lost. What this war is making Only the sufferers know the cost. But God who reigns on high Watches each move of earth, And he knows the reason why This horrid war was given birth.

SATURDAY, MARCH 11, 1916.

Some months ago it was stated that should the common council pass a certain resolution taking over the "Bump-the-bumps" road the Pennsylvania Railroad would immediately proceed to widen and improve the "Hole-in-the-Wall." The Citizen at that time took no stock in the statement and insisted that if the resolution was passed the "Hole-in-the-Wall" would be closed entirely. When the Board of Freeholders and the officials of the railroad met last Tuesday it was learned from the high officials of the company that there was no intention of improving the "Hole-in-the-Wall" but they desired to close it, and submitted as a substitute plan for an overhead bridge somewhere in the vicinity of Bergen Hill. This substitute will never answer for the present route along which people have bought property, even from the railroad company, because this was a prominent road to and from the coast. If a bridge was built it would come under the jurisdiction of the city, and would be a burden to the city for ages to come. The board of freeholders has already had considerable experience on the up-keep of bridges, and knows how expensive they are, and even now the Pennsylvania Railroad Company is endeavoring to saddle the cost of a new draw at Albany street bridge, New Brunswick, upon the county, which became a necessity through acts of their own creation. All we want is the "Hole-in-the-Wall" widened to a suitable width, but the length is immaterial. It is alleged that the inference was made that shipments at this port would be transferred to Greenville, if "The Hole-in-the-Wall" was not closed. Such an assertion, if made to gain a point, is nothing short of an insult to this city.

The moving picture production, "The Battle Cry of Peace," is a wonderfully interesting prediction of what would take place if this country was ever invaded by a hostile army. The scenes portrayed are not only terribly grim and realistic but are also convincingly probable, which fact is driven home to the witness of the film. It is an almost invincible argument in favor of preparedness and should be seen by everyone, both young and old, whether a peace advocate or not. The pictures will leave an impression upon the memory which will not soon fade and to see the scenes depicted will give the thinker considerable food for serious thought and meditation.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

Mr. Editor—
Under ordinary circumstances no reply would be given to the swan song of our young friend Coakley; and were it strictly a personal matter I would have nothing further to say; but in addition to the personal vituperation which he has made, the statements and general tenor of his allegations, not only have reflected upon the intelligence of the citizens and taxpayers, but have been of a nature to warrant grave concern as to the advisability of having men of this caliber in a position where they can exercise an influence on the administration of City Officers and the use of City Funds. This condition is accentuated in that it is the thought of many that Mr. Coakley's sayings are an expression of the attitude of the members of the Board of Health. This is either true or the esteem in which Mr. Coakley has been held by myself and many other citizens has been a mistake. As I have repeatedly stated, the personal insinuations which have been directed against me are so unworthy as to not merit your valuable space to contradict. The Public, however, should not forget the points at issue in this controversy and for this reason a brief rehearsal may not be amiss. It will be recalled that in my efforts to look after the interests of the City in questioning the appropriation asked for by the Board of Health I was personally assailed. My reply to this unwarranted attack brought forth a further communication which clearly indicated a condition of mind on the part of Mr. Coakley (which presumably reflected the attitude of the Board of Health), that appeared inimical to the interests of the citizens at large. He explained that the public were getting off much cheaper than the law allowed. He hinted at probable epidemics as an excuse for the expenditure of money. He placed great stress upon the meritorious (?) action of the board in purchasing material to fumigate public buildings, etc. However, he failed to explain the necessity for the appropriation, notwithstanding such explanation was asked for by myself and was expected by the public generally. In one of his articles he seemed to take delight in quoting the law that would permit the Board of Health to extract further money from the public. In my opinion it would have served a better purpose had he quoted the law which provided that the Health Officer or Sanitary Inspector must pass a State examination and have a State license before he is empowered to act. What is the use of making a bluff at enforcing orders based upon reports of an inspector who is not qualified according to law. Look this point up Mr. Coakley and inform the Inspector before he in his zeal and enthusiasm gets into serious trouble. I wish to take this opportunity to state that there is no personal ill feeling on my part so far as Mr. Coakley is concerned. In fact it was always my opinion that he was a gentleman and it may be, as many think, that his writings are merely expressions of the attitude of the Board. At any rate, I believe there is good in every one and credit should be given where credit is due. For this reason, I take the opportunity to congratulate Mr. Coakley on his efforts to do some of the business pertaining to the Board of Health. A glance at the reports of the last meeting will show that such business as was done, Coakley did. The Board is to be commended for confirming his action. Inasmuch as he appears to be the only one who does anything, it is but natural that the people should ask why he was not made a member of the Board. I wonder if it is because there is no fixed salary for a member of the Board, while there is a salary for the Secretary? Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your kind indulgence, I am
COLIN STRATTON,
Councilman-at-Large.

EGAN "GOOD ROADS" BILL

MEETING WITH FAVOR

The Egan "Good Roads" bill will be finally voted upon in the Upper House early next week, probably on Monday, according to Senator Charles M. Egan, of Hudson County. He is confident that he has sufficient votes to insure its passage and immediately after being approved by the Senate the measure will go to the Assembly. Another satisfactory result of the legislator's campaign on behalf of his bill is that the United States Army War College has given its approval.

Some days ago the Senator received assurances from Senator Gaunt, to whose committee the measure had been referred, that it would be reported and thus removed the fears of those advocating the good roads proposition that it might be smothered in committee.

"I am confident that both Senate and Assembly will act favorably upon my Good Roads Bill," declared Egan. "Furthermore I am well pleased with the report from Brigadier General M. M. Macomb, chief of the War College Division, General Staff, U. S. A., indorsing the measure from the standing point of national defense."

Congressman James A. Hamill, of Jersey City, became interested in the Egan bill some time ago and submitted a copy of it to the War College, asking that body's opinion. The result was the full approval of the plan by the War Department.

"It is evident," the report states in part, "that roads of the character proposed in this bill must be of great military value if the State of New Jersey should ever form a part of a theatre of war. It is therefore the opinion of the War College Division that in developing such a system of roads the State of New Jersey will contribute materially to the military preparedness of the nation."

As has been advanced before the Egan Bill provides for a $7,000,000 bond issue for the construction, reconstruction and improvement of roads, interest and principal of which will be paid out of the automobile license and registration fees, fines, penalties, etc., and there is to be no cost to the taxpayers for securing these highways that will contribute to the preparedness program as well as affording a means of bringing financial returns to the various sections of the state.

Working on A Principle

It Brought Its Logical Consequence.

By F. A. MITCHEL

"Mother, I'm going to the city to make a fortune," said Joel Harding. His mother looked at him, surprised. He knew what she would say, though she did not say it. What would she say? He was talking the farm without Joel? They could not afford to hire help, and if he deserted them they would have a much harder time than now.

"I'm tired," continued Joel, "of seeing you and father grinding your lives in this fashion. There's a little bit to be squeezed out of our long 'red lands, and if I don't break away from them we'll none of us ever have any comfort. I was talking the other day with Mr. Ashurst, whose family has been spending the month of August with the Parkers. He says that any man can get rich if he'll do just one thing—he must save every cent he gets enough money together to make an investment. From that time on he has an assistant—the money invested. It is making more money for him even when he is asleep. He saves some more, and this, with the interest that has accumulated on his first investment, enables him to make another. By keeping up this process for a number of years he rolls up enough to be able to do anything, ride in his carriage and in summer time go among the farmers, drinking the milk and eating the honey that we folks work so hard to produce."

Mrs. Harding had lived long enough in the world to pick what flaws there might be in such reasoning, but her first object is what her child says. She saw that Joel had got an idea in his head, and the only objection to it he would listen to was that while he was gathering this interest-bearing capital she and his father would be obliged to work all the besides being deprived of the to be derived from association in only child. So she said:

"Well, Joel, if your mind is set on going to the city to make a fortune, suppose you'd better go. You're satisfied here any longer?" Joel looked at her in his arms, kissed her and then he said: "The principal reason for the move was that he might get his parents' condition. That night Mrs. Harding had a long talk with her husband about Joel's proposition. Farmer Harding was against it, but when his wife said her arguments, which he put upon him, and began to "in, as husbands usually do in such circumstances, and at he would not oppose his. The mother put her son's as good order as possible. Next Monday morning Joel, with all the cash they could spare, started on his journey. Looking back at his parents, he said: "Give me five years and I'll return money with a thousand per cent interest."

Harding turned away with a to hide her tears, while he talked into the house with

If I understand aright the principle which he is to make a fortune he's sending us, in five years a thousand per cent interest on the money will be a violation of that principle. Success is the principle he acts upon is based on strict adherence to that principle."

"O, yes, you are always figuring things out on principle. Joel is doing his for our good, and he will make good."

Joel found a position in the city at a week. Disregarding a temptation to wait before saving (it is more, he lived on $4 a week, giving the other dollar in a savings bank). At the end of his first year he displaced in the bank $52 and as much more as had come from increase salary and extras earned, in all $200.

Among his fellow employees Joel was considered the stingiest of the lot, but his employers, seeing that he possessed determination and self control, advanced him rapidly. Either he possessed business qualifications naturally, or his heart being exclusively on business, he became an adept at any rate, he soon came to be trusted with matters by the firm were not intrusted to his fellow of equal grade with himself. His naturally brought him increase salary, and before the first five years had passed he was occupying position of head clerk.

Joel did not forget that he had volunteered to send his father and mother the end of five years the money they had advanced him, with 1,000 per cent interest. They had scraped up $25 for him, on which the interest at 1,000 per cent for five years would be, with the principal, $1,275. Joel had at the end of the fifth year property worth $4,000. It was invested in railway securities which were worth at white so much as he had paid for

To reduce his nest egg by so an amount, especially selling it was not to be considered. He is parents that he had made out three or four times over. A defer sending it to them till he could sell certain securities in which he had invested at the price paid for them.

"I told you so," said Mr. Harding to his wife.

"Now, pa, how unreasonable you are! You wouldn't have Joel lose by selling something he had bought at a less price than what he had paid when by waiting he could get more, would you?"

"No, I wouldn't," replied Harding. "And I wouldn't have him take nearly $1,300 from his capital to send to us. It would be a violation of the principle on which he set out."

This was too deep reasoning for the wife and mother, but since her husband did not blame their boy she was satisfied.

Joel did not find a convenient time to send his parents the money, as he had proposed. The price of his securities advanced, but in the mean time he had bought more at a low price and was scraping together all his assets to pay for them. During the next few years he was put in charge of the financial department of the concern for which he worked and saw many opportunities to make money that he had never been aware of before.

But all these opportunities involved capital. Not a single one could he taken advantage of without it. "You can't make money, Joel," said the head of the firm, "without money to make it with." Joel saw the truth of this statement, and in one of his letters home quoted it as a reason why he was withholding funds from his parents which he felt he should have sent them. "When I get to a stopping point," he wrote, "I'll be able to produce it all very easily."

"Yes," said his father, "if he ever reaches the stopping point. But he never will."

"Now, pa," said Mrs. Harding, "that's just like you. You're always making out that Joel is selfish. He's the warmest hearted boy I ever knew. He's doing all this work in the city that he may help us in our old age."

"My dear wife," replied farmer Harding, "you have made two statements, each requiring a separate reply. In the first place, Joel is carrying out the principle on which he set out to make a fortune, and it indicates great self control. But that principle is incompatible with his doing many things he would like to do. In the second place, if he ever makes his fortune and finds a stopping place we will be too old to enjoy the luxuries that his money will buy. We'll want only our lodging and enough to eat. We've got the farm."

Ten years from the time Joel went to the city there were changes in the firm by which he was employed. The senior partner died and was soon after followed by the junior. There was no one to take the latter's place except Joel. He was made a member of the firm and manager of the business. He had already become the slave to the cumulative principle; he now became the slave of an extensive business. At first he doubted if he was competent to manage it, and this induced him to devote his whole self to the purpose.

His attention to detail was remarkable. There was not a man under him who dared take any action whatever without consulting him. This in time broke down his health. Those interested with him begged him to leave certain details to others. He refused. Finally, to get him away from the business long enough to prevent its breaking him down entirely, some of the owners of the stock of the concern—it had become a corporation—got up a conspiracy to kidnap him. They succeeded in getting him on a yacht and carried him out to sea. This broke the spell. After a month's cruise he returned to his desk, and finding that the business had got on very well without him, he decided it under department heads, remaining himself director of the whole.

Joel had been so absorbed in his business that he had forgotten all about his father and mother on the farm. He had at last reached the point that had danced like an ignis fatuus ahead of him. Money was now no object to him. He could show his old father and mother with gold coin and not feel it. He would not write them; he would go back after thirty years' absence and supply every possible want.

One day a prosperous looking gentleman in a fur lined overcoat and silk hat appeared at the Harding farm. Mrs. Harding at the moment was throwing a pan of dishwater from the kitchen door on to the grass when she saw the man and heard him call:

"Mother!"

Then he advanced and took her in his arms. Just then Farmer Harding came in, looked at the gentleman and wondered who he was.

"It's Joel, pa!" cried the old lady, beside herself with joy.

"Father, mother, I've made the fortune I went away to make when a boy. I've come back to give you everything you want. If you prefer to stay here I'll build you a palace. If you would like to travel you shall have ample funds. Tell me what way I can serve you."

The old couple looked at each other blankly. Neither spoke.

"Tell me, father, what can I do for you?"

"I don't know of anything I want just now but a little tobacco and a new cob pipe."

"The heart of the man with a fortune sank."

"Mother, dear mother," he moaned, "surely there is something I can do for you."

"Yes. I need a new pair of shoes. Those I have are too young for me."

A few days later Joel went back to the city, leaving his father and mother in the same condition he had found them.

Are Working Twenty-Four Hours a Day!

An advertisement placed in the CITIZEN has no time limit to its usefulness to the advertiser. It works 24 hours a day. If your ad is well written and interesting, it will be laid aside by the reader for future reference. Or, if your ad reaches the right prospect, it will make an impression on his memory which will last for days, weeks and even months.

Consider for a moment, can't you recall an advertisement which you read months ago which was so strongly impressed on your memory that you still remember the offer made?

The results of advertising may not be instantaneous. Don't expect that when you spend a dollar for advertising today that it will return to you ten-fold tomorrow.

Newspaper advertising is the very best medium for bringing to the attention of the buying public your business and your wares and gaining their confidence by impressing on them your personality and reputation for fair dealing.

SATURDAY, MARCH 11, 1916.

OUR COMMON BOND.

(From Newark News.)

In naming our "sense of justice and humanity" as the limit beyond which sacrifices cannot be made to peace, President Wilson has gone to the very bedrock of our national existence. That there is such a limit, every American believes, although, naturally, there has been a difference of opinion as to what the limit is. The President has given the country a basis upon which every one can unite, and it is a basis that robs militarism of all its terrors.

If any one thing has impressed itself upon us more than another during the past eighteen months, it is our lack of national coherence. We have been made to realize that neither nationalism nor racialism can be counted upon to weld our conglomerate people together and concentrate their energies. On the contrary, the influence of numerous racial groups within this country arouses apprehensions lest it be strong enough to negative efforts undertaken in the interest of the whole people.

Similarly, it has become manifest that a great number of our people have come here too recently to have cultivated a patriotism either of the mind or of the heart. Love of America is not an inheritance and a sentiment with them. They had no part in its past, its history awakens no memories, they invested nothing in its making. They have no sentimental attachment to its places, its institutions, its soil. To them it spells opportunity, which they often measure in material terms only. They are mainly concerned with its present and future, which they are naturally hesitant to jeopardize.

Yet there is a basis upon which all these diverse people can unite, but it must be as broad as the world. The President has singled it out, "our sense of humanity and justice." This is something that belongs exclusively to no race, no country. It is the possession of all peoples. It is the goal toward which civilization has always struggled. All the great protests that have marked the path of history have been against inhumanity and injustice. The nation that is most humane and just carries the most promise of cultivating the permanent and undivided loyalty of its people. To obtain it, the emigrants of all time have given up their homelands and built for themselves new homes across the seas.

If this were not true, the fate of Belgium and Poland, Serbia and Armenia, would not have touched the world's heart as it has. Because it is true, it is the limit beyond which we cannot make sacrifices to peace. If America sacrificed that, as the President said, it would cease to be America, and we would deprive ourselves of the very foundation upon which alone we can hope to build the great cosmopolitan commonwealth of free, liberty-loving people, for which past generations have given their lives and blood and treasure.

America has chosen to be more than a race. It has chosen to be a segment of humanity, of diverse inheritances and histories and sentiments. It has staked its existence upon the free interplay of humanness, upon the co-operation of sovereign individuals working with a common will toward a just and humane commonwealth. We are that or nothing. If we sacrifice that we will be nothing.

EXAMINE YOUR PEACH TREES.

Peach growers will find on examining their trees that quite a percentage of the buds have been killed due to the warm spell we had several weeks ago which was followed by low temperatures. Thus in many cases the crop will be very light and this season is particularly good for cutting back and renewing the tops on old trees and trees that have made very little growth last season. It will also enable the obtaining of several more crops of fruit from old trees which are near the end of their usefulness.

There are only a few weeks for the pruning season and the work should be cleaned up before the rush of the spring work. During this month the trees should be sprayed with commercial lime and sulphur to overcome the San Jose scale and peach leaf curl.

Any questions arising as to pruning or spraying of trees will be cheerfully answered by the County Farm Demonstrator, Irving L. Owen, either by letter or by a personal visit to your farm if you wish it.

Woman's World

How One Englishwoman Describes Her Many War Duties.

THE COUNTESS OF ESSEX.

"Every morning," recently said Lady Essex, who was Miss Adele Grant of New York, "I go to St. James' palace and work, with a large number of other ladies, from 10 o'clock until 1— that is, for Queen Mary's Needlework guild. We have made 1,000,000 respirators for the soldiers in the trenches against gas attacks, and we have made innumerable surgical stores—bandages, etc.

"A good many other things fall to our care. This morning, for instance, 100 boxes of towels arrived from the country. Dressing gowns, shirts, underwear, all sorts of things, come to us as we ask for them. We sort these, repack and send them, in required quantities, to their destinations. You may recall the war office asking for 3,000,000 pairs of socks about Christmas time a year ago. These were sent to us from everywhere, many of them incorrectly marked or not marked at all as to sizes. We had to measure every pair, label them and put them in packets of ten. That task alone meant six weeks' continuous work.

"My other duties are really too numerous to remember offhand. Let me see. At Watford—Watford is a town of 40,000 inhabitants in Hertfordshire, where we have a country place—I am on the executive committee of the urban council for war relief—that is, for the relief of civilians. I am president of the Soldiers and Sailors' Families' association, which supplements when necessary the war allowances given to wives and families. We have voluntary helpers, who take different districts, visit, write letters, find out if the families are getting their allowances and give privately additional help where it is needed. Often a woman wants to attend some function of her husband's regiment and lacks proper clothes, or, as an instance, a wife had word that her husband was wounded and in hospital at Plymouth. She had no means of her own to go to see him, and these had to be privately supplied her.

"Take the motors. At the beginning of the war the Automobile club was immediately offered 2,000 motors for war service. Since then many more have been quietly given, and these private individuals who have any left do not keep them for their own pleasure. "Then everybody who has one lends it three or four afternoons a week for convalescent soldiers. We may be told after awhile that the use of motors must be cut down on account of petrol.

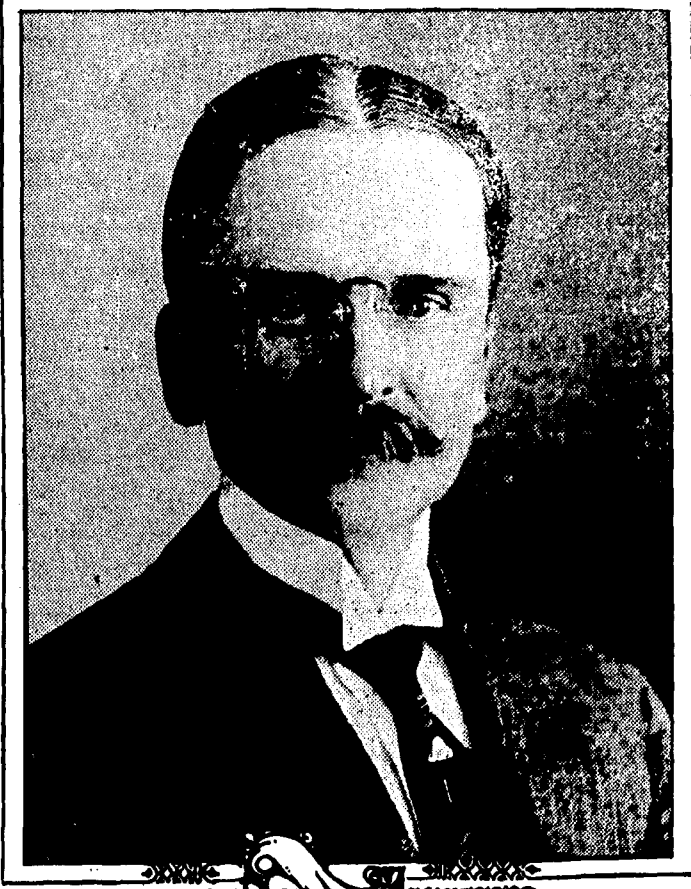

"Another luxury that may seem strange—the theater. No one dreamed of going to a theater at first. We hadn't the heart to do anything. Later the actors came out and said they were starving. Then the children returned from school for their holidays, and we felt we must exert ourselves to make things a little cheerful for them. We took them to the theaters. Gradually we ourselves got to going again. Now there are the convalescent soldiers who need entertainment, and their relatives, and the soldiers on leave—there must be relief.

"There is no longer any such thing as dinner parties," Lady Essex added. "We're quite put them out of our minds. Eight or ten people meet perhaps several times a week and happen to dine together, but there is no thought of dress and little of the dinner, except to keep it simple and sufficient. A dinner used to begin with soup and fish; there was an entree. But now! Now it is soup or fish; there is a meat course and a sweet; that is all."

SENATOR CHARLES O'CONNOR HENNESSY.

The Bergen senator, candidate for the governorship, said in a recent speech: "We cannot make a proud and prosperous state with merely 'business government.' We must fight the poverty disease; make more jobs for idle men on the farm and in the factory, better wages and salaries for the employed and more profits for the manufacturer and tradesman. I will try in this campaign to point the way to all this."

SPORTING COMMENT.

SCULLY MAY PLAY INITIAL.

SACK FOR PRINCETON NINE

Princeton, March 8.—There is some excellent material here for a well-balanced team this spring, but Coach Bill Clark of the Princeton baseball squad faces the difficult problem of molding the men into shape. Last year there was a tendency to blow up at critical times, to throw away games which a little more quick thinking and a little more team work might have saved.

While the loss of Gill, Hanks, Hoyt and Salmon of last year's varsity will be felt, it will not prove a very serious handicap owing to the excellence of last year's substitutes. The pitching prospects are more encouraging than they have been for several seasons and the receiving end of the battery is also well fortified.

In addition to the three regulars Deyo, Link and Chaplin, all of whom pitched steady ball last spring, there are several rookies available. Lamberton, though erratic, has worked in many varsity games and may prove of use in the box this spring, when not used in the outfield. Thompson and Dowd of last year's freshman team should also prove valuable timber for the pitching staff. In spite of the loss of Salmon the backstop work should be well taken care of by Driggs and B. Douglas.

If Douglas is shifted from first base to behind the bat it will leave a hole in the infield for Coach Clark to fill.

Scully at First, Maybe.

If this shift is made, Scully, last year's second baseman, and son of Congressman Scully of South Amboy will probably be used on the first sack. Shea, who was a substitute infield last year, seems the logical choice for third. Rothenstein, a new man, is showing up well at short stop and may be retained in that position. If such is the case Captain Law will be moved to second base. It was expected that Hoyt would be the mainstay of the outfield but the enforced retirement from the game will necessitate an entirely new trio, unless Driggs can be spared as a catcher, which is hardly probable. Among other candidates for the outfield are Tibbitt Cory and Keating, who showed improvement last season. It is also possible that Chaplin and Lamberton will be used in the outfield when they are not pitching.

The work so far this year has consisted mainly of battery practice and short batting and fielding drills in the cage. The season will be ushered in March 25.

One of the reasons for sharp criticism of the British censorship of war news is that while it is exasperating it does not appear to be efficient.

JERSEY NEWS CONDENSED.

Interest From all Parts of the State as Gleaned From Our Exchanges Briefly Paragraphed.

The rain the antilles em com-re com-well as the rarer metallic constitue... deposits, including gold and silver. Such springs, therefore, suggest that many and perhaps most ore-bearing veins have been formed by hot water rising from great depths, which have brought their metal contents up in solution and deposited them in open spaces or fissures in the rocks through which the waters passed, the deposition of some ores being influenced by chemical reaction with the surrounding rock. Many ore deposits are undoubtedly formed in other ways, for some are unquestionably of sedimentary origin and the metal content of some others has been carried down, re-deposited, and concentrated by rain water that descended into the earth's crust, but the "hydrothermal" origin—that is, their deposition from ascending hot water—of many of the more valuable ore deposits is indicated by the close relation observed at many places between mineral veins and eruptive rocks. Thermal waters are believed to be, in part at least, given off by slowly cooling and solidifying masses of igneous rock (magma) deep within the earth. (U. S. Geological Survey.)

Belgian Congo.
Belgian Congo, founded thirty years ago, is still in the early stage of development. So far practically no manufacturing industries have yet been established, and, aside from the important copper mines in the Katanga district, the only large industrial enterprises are the railways and river transportation services. It may be said that all business activities in the colony are devoted to the collection of tropical products—rubber, ivory, gum copal, palm oil and kernels, cacao, etc.—and the railway and river services are in reality only accessories to these activities, having been established primarily to aid in the transportation of these products to the seaports. The gathering of rubber in Congo has never recovered its former activity, and in all probability will never again be so rich a source of income to the colony as it was previous to 1912.

Ship Money.
Charles I. was badly in need of money, and his attorney general in the course of his antiquarian researches discovered that in the dim ages of the past the crown had issued writs to the cities and towns on the coast requiring them to provide vessels for the royal needs, and he suggested that this ancient right might be brought into use again. Instead of the actual vessels a money contribution might be exacted instead. Thus the king would be able to tax a larger part of the realm while theoretically observing the laws. Writs for ship money were accordingly issued, but the patriot John Hampden declared that they were illegal and raised such a protest against them that they were practically nullified.

Weed Pests.
Of the 200 species of ferns native to this country a few have become more or less serious weed pests. The most troublesome are the bay scented fern and the brake. According to a bulletin of the department of agriculture, cutting off the tops close to the soil surface twice a year for two years will kill out nearly all ferns. The best times to do the cutting are just previous to spring, or about the middle of June, and the middle of August.

William D. Edwards.
Former State Senator William D. Edwards, one of the best known lawyers in the state, and an authority on municipal law and taxation, died suddenly from heart disease at his home, 2627 Boulevard, Jersey City, early Monday. His brother, Edward I. Edwards, is controller of New Jersey.
Mr. Edwards had been in failing health for a long time, but had managed to carry on his extensive practice. Thursday he was taken ill after a strenuous day in court, but it was believed his trouble was not serious. His death was not expected. Mr. Edwards is survived by his widow and seven brothers. Mrs. Edwards was at the bedside when the end came.

State Death Rate Lowest Last Year.
Semi-official tabulations, subject to correction in the checking-up process by the State Department of Health, indicate that the death rate for 1915 was the lowest in the history of New Jersey. These figures indicate that the total number of deaths for the year was 39,942, giving a death rate of 13.86 as against 14.02 for the preceding year, which had the lowest death rate up to that time.

Tabulations for January in the present year show a marked increase over the number of deaths for preceding months. The total number of deaths for January was 4,408, of which 4,439 were of residents. This would give a resident death rate of 18.48 for the month, the largest in the history of the state. The most marked increase occurred in the diseases of the respiratory system, the increase in pneumonia alone being 467 over the preceding month. This may be attributable in whole or in part to the epidemic of grip, which has been particularly productive of serious after effects, including pneumonia. There was also an increase of 236 in the number of deaths from diseases of the circulatory system.

"As for age periods an increase is shown," said the bulletin issued by the board, "for all ages, but the increase is more marked in the deaths of persons sixty years old and more, the increase for this age period being more than 400 as compared with the preceding month. It would seem from the data at hand that the high death rate for January was due in a large measure to the prevalence of acute respiratory diseases during that month."

Richard A. McCurdy.
Richard Aldrich McCurdy, who was president of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York when the revolution in the life insurance business was brought about by a series of investigations by a New York legislative committee in 1904 and 1905, died Monday morning at 2:45 o'clock at his home, 200 South street, Morristown. Mr. McCurdy Saturday night suffered an acute attack of heart trouble, with which he had been afflicted six years. He became unconscious Sunday morning and remained in that condition until his death.

Mr. McCurdy's company was one of the three, the investigation of which first brought Charles Evans Hughes to public notice in a large way, as a result of which he became successively Governor of New York and Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.
Born in New York City, January 29, 1835, the son of Robert H. McCurdy, Mr. McCurdy was graduated from the Harvard Law School in 1856 and practiced his profession in New York City with Lucius Robinson, afterward Governor of New York.

Asylum For Woman Who Poisoned Her Two Babies.

Mrs. Mabel Fields, twenty-four years old, of 2731 Sherman avenue, Camden, who killed her two small children with poison on November 21 and took some herself, has been pronounced insane. Prosecutor Kraft will make application before Judge Boyle to have Mrs. Fields committed to the asylum at Blackwood. She had been separated from her husband. The children poisoned were Frank, fourteen months old, and Mabel, three months old.

Writ Granted in Drawbridge Suit.
On Saturday last the Board of Freeholders of Middlesex County was granted a writ of certiorari by Supreme Court Justice Bergen for a review of the recent action of the Board of Utility Commissioners in finding that the responsibility for the maintenance of the canal draw-bridge at the foot of Albany street, New Brunswick, rested upon the county.

The writ was granted upon the application of George L. Burton, county solicitor. He sets forth that he applied for an order requiring either the Delaware & Raritan Canal Company or the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, lessees, to erect a new draw-bridge, and that the petition was dismissed by the Utility Commission on February 1.
It is asserted by Mr. Burton that either of the companies mentioned should maintain the draw and that the decision of the Utility Commission was illegal, unjust and against the weight of evidence in the case, with a resultant burden and obligation upon Middlesex county.

Death Summons Two Veterans.
Two deaths occurred Sunday at the Home for Disabled Soldiers in Kearny. Louis Helm of Jersey City succumbed at 2:45 o'clock in the afternoon and James T. Stackhouse of Trenton late in the evening. The former's death is attributed to paralytic dementia. He was eighty-five years old and admitted to the institution in August, 1900. He served in Company C, Seventy-eighth Regiment, and Company C, 102d Regiment, New York Volunteer Infantry. He was a native of Germany.
Mr. Stackhouse was quartermaster-sergeant of the 179th Pennsylvania Drafted Militia. He entered the institution in October, 1908. His death was caused by catarrhal enteritis.

Robbed Home and Gave Loot to His Fiancee.
Howard Smith, twenty-six years old, of Atlantic Highlands was held Sunday afternoon by Justice of the Peace Williams in $1,000 bail after he had confessed to robbing the summer home of the Misses Ivy and Hazel Troutman. His arrest came about through his gifts to his fiancée, living in Red Bank. They included much expensive clothing and silverware which Miss Hazel Troutman identified as belonging to her sister.

The robbery of the Troutman cottage occurred about a week ago and everything movable was taken. The police say Smith used a sleigh to take away his loot. Smith's fiancée, when told that the gifts she had been receiving were stolen, became hysterical. The clothing was unmarked and practically new. The girl never suspected that Smith obtained them in any way other than by purchase, she said. According to the police, Smith had a confederate in the robbery.

Dies When Almost 90.
Bartlett V. Clark, Rahway's oldest citizen, died Monday night at his home, 68 Commerce street, that city. Had Mr. Clark lived until May 2 he would have celebrated his ninety-ninth birthday. He was born in Chatham, came to Rahway in 1859 and conducted a boot and shoe business ten years ago. Mr. Clark for fifty years had been prominently identified with the city's interest. He was vice president of the Rahway Savings Institution. He is survived by a nephew, Albert B. Wilson, and a niece, Mrs. James McCullum.

Anthony Viehmann.
Anthony Viehmann of New Brunswick died Monday night of heart trouble. He had served as a member of the Board of Education and also of the Middlesex County freeholders. Born in Germany, Mr. Viehmann came to this country in 1864, and had lived in New Brunswick since 1867. He was a member of the German Reformed Church. Four children survive. They are former Mayor George A. Viehmann, Mrs. Estelle Pickard of Philadelphia and the Misses Louise and Bertha Viehmann of New Brunswick.

Record for Local Option.
George L. Record, Progressive Republican candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, has sent a letter to the clergymen of the state declaring that he will not only sign a local option bill like the Gaunt measure if passed but that if elected Governor he "will use the great power of the office to procure the passage of the bill."
"I am aware," writes Mr. Record, "that this is the first time any candidate for Governor has ever run on a local option platform, but I believe that the great majority of the Republican voters are in favor of local option, and I am satisfied that with a united effort centered on one candidate, among all the friends of this measure, we can carry the primaries and elect the Governor and the law can be passed at the next session of the Legislature."

Dr. James G. Mason, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Metuchen, who was the candidate of the Prohibition party for President in 1912, has written to Mr. Record commending him for his stand on local option, but urging him to go further and join the Prohibition party.

Church Fair Nets $6,500.
Over $6,500 was cleared at the Mardi Gras held at Columbia Hall, New Brunswick, by the parishioners of St. Peter's Church, which ended Tuesday when a reception was given to Monsignor John A. O'Grady. Monday night Miss Jessie Paul, who won the queen's contest, was crowned queen by the retiring queen, Miss Marie Francis, known as Queen Regina I. The church held the fête to secure $6,300 to pay off the debt.

About the best a stepmother ever gets is the worst of it.

Doesn't Amount to Much.
The only man who can get a reputation for being absolutely consistent is one who never says anything worth making a record of.

Youth and Old Age.
My little niece Gracie was sitting on grandmother's lap. As she was rocking to and fro baby kept staring into her face, and after a few minutes of silence she said: "Grandma, you aren't so very new, are you?"—Chicago Tribune.

Sad Awakening.
The young man who fondly believed that two could live upon as little as one arrived reluctantly at a complete realization of the falsity of the theory when the family doctor offers congratulations and says "it" is "twins."

WAR—WHY?
(By R. T. R.)
Why was this war given birth?
Why are lives taken day after day?
Why are armies trying to conquer the earth?
And thus be it each day,
Vows are broken, hearts are breaking.
All love's labor seems as lost.
What this war is making
Only the sufferers know the cost.
But God who reigns on high
Watches each move of earth,
And he knows the reason why
This horrid war was given birth.

...all certain securities in
...had invested at the price
...them.
...you so," said Mr. Harding to
...
...now, pa, how unreasonable you
...You wouldn't have Joel lose by
...ing something he had bought at a
...less price than what he had paid
...when by waiting he could get more,
...would you?"
...No, I wouldn't," replied Harding.
...And I wouldn't have him take nearly
...$1,300 from his capital to send to us.
...It would be a violation of the princi-
...ple on which he set out."
...This was too deep reasoning for the
...wife and mother, but since her hus-
...band did not blame their boy she was
...satisfied.
...Joel did not find a convenient time
...to send his parents the money, as he
...had proposed. The price of his se-
...curities advanced, but in the mean
...time he had bought more at a low
...price and was scraping together all
...his assets to pay for them. During
...the next few years he was put in ...charge of the financial department of
...the concern for which he worked and
...saw many opportunities to make money
...which he had never been aware of
...before.
...But all these opportunities involved
...capital. Not a single one could be ...taken advantage of without it. "You
...can't make money, Joel," said the head
...of the firm, "without money to make
...it with." Joel saw the truth of this ...statement, and in one of his letters
...home quoted it as a reason why he
...was withholding funds from his par-
...ents which he felt he should have sent
...them. "When I get to a stopping
...point," he wrote, "I'll be able to pro-
...duce it all very easily."
...Yes," said his father, "if he ever
...reaches the stopping point. But he
...never will."
...Now, pa," said Mrs. Harding, "that's
...the way you're always making
...mistakes. He's the warm-
...hearted fellow. He's do-
...ing his best. He's work-
...ing in the city that he
...can't get out of. He's
...a poor old age."
...wife," replied farmer Hard-
...ing, "I've made two statements,
...one a separate reply. In
...the first, Joel is carrying out the ...principle which he set out to make
...good, and it indicates great self-
...reliance. But that principle is incom-
...patible with his doing many things he
...would like to do. In the second place,
...if he ever makes his fortune and finds
...a stopping place we will be too old to
...enjoy the luxuries that his money will
...buy. We'll want only our lodging and
...enough to eat. We've got the farm."
...Ten years from the time Joel went
...to the city there were changes in the ...firm by which he was employed. The ...senior partner died and was soon after
...followed by the junior. There was no
...one to take the latter's place except
...Joel. He was made a member of the ...firm and manager of the business. He ...had already become the slave to the ...cumulative principle; he now became
...the slave of an extensive business. At
...first he doubted if he was competent
...to manage it, and this induced him to
...devote his whole self to the purpose.
...His attention to detail was remark-
...able. There was not a man under him
...who dared take any action whatever
...without consulting him. This in time
...broke down his health. Those inter-
...ested with him begged him to leave
...certain details to others. He refused.
...Finally, to get him away from the busi-
...ness long enough to prevent its break-
...ing him down entirely, some of the ...owners of the stock of the concern—it
...had become a corporation—got up a
...conspiracy to kidnap him. They suc-
...ceeded in getting him on a yacht and
...carried him out to sea. This broke the
...spell. After a month's cruise he re-
...turned to his desk, and, finding that
...the business had got on very well with-
...out him, he divided it under depart-
...ment heads, retaining himself direc-
...tor of the whole.
...Joel had been so absorbed in his ...business that he had forgotten all
...about his father and mother on the ...farm. He had at last reached the ...point that had danced like an ignis
...fatuus ahead of him. Money was
...now no object to him. He could show-
...er his old father and mother with gold
...coin and not feel it. He would not
...write them; he would go back after
...thirty years' absence and supply every
...possible want.
...One day a prosperous looking gen-
...tleman in a fur lined overcoat and
...silk hat appeared at the Harding farm.
...Mrs. Harding at the moment was ...throwing a pan of dishwater from the ...kitchen door on to the grass when she
...saw the man and heard him call:
..."Mother!"
...Then he advanced and took her in
...his arms. Just then Farmer Harding
...came in, looked at the gentleman and
...wondered who he was.
..."It's Joel, pa!" cried the old lady, be-
...side herself with joy.
..."Father, mother, I've made the for-
...tune I went away to make when a
...boy. I've come back to give you ev-
...erything you want. If you prefer to ...stay here I'll build you a palace. If ...you would like to travel you shall have
...ample funds. Tell me what way I can
...serve you."
...The old couple looked at each other
...blankly. Neither spoke.
..."Tell me, father, what can I do for
...you?"
..."I don't know of anything I want
...just now but a little tobacco and a
...new cob pipe."
...The heart of the man with a fortune
...sank.
..."Mother, dear mother," he moaned,
..."surely there is something I can do
...for you."
..."Yes, I need a new pair of specs.
...Those I have are too young for me."
...A few days later Joel went back to
...the city, leaving his father and mother
...in the same condition he had found
...them.

How One Englishwoman Describes Her Many War Duties.

THE COUNTESS OF ESSEX.

Justice humanity as the limit beyond which sacrifices cannot be made to peace. President Wilson has gone to the very bedrock of our national existence. That there is such a limit, every American believes, although, naturally, there has been a difference of opinion as to what the limit is. The President has given the country a basis upon which every one can unite, and it is a basis that robs militarism of all its terrors.

If any one thing has impressed itself upon us more than another during the past eighteen months, it is our lack of national coherence. We have been made to realize that neither nationalism nor racialism can be counted upon to weld our conglomerate people together and concentrate their energies. On the contrary, the influence of numerous racial groups within this country arouses apprehensions lest it be strong enough to negative efforts undertaken in the interest of the whole people.

Similarly, it has become manifest that a great number of our people have come here too recently to have cultivated a patriotism either of the mind or of the heart. Love of America is not an inheritance and a sentiment with them. They had no part in its past, its history awakens no memories, they invested nothing in its making. They have no sentimental attachment to its places, its institutions, its soil. To them it spells opportunity, which they often measure in material terms only. They are mainly concerned with its present and future, which they are naturally hesitant to jeopardize.

Yet there is a basis upon which all these diverse people can unite, but it must be as broad as the world. The President has singled it out, "our sense of humanity and justice." This is something that belongs exclusively to no race, no country. It is the possession of all peoples. It is the goal toward which civilization has always struggled. All the great protests that have marked the path of history have been against inhumanity and injustice. The nation that is most humane and just carries the most promise of cultivating the permanent and undivided loyalty of its people. To obtain it, the emigrants of all time have given up their homelands and built for themselves new homes across the seas.

If this were not true, the fate of Belgium and Poland, Serbia and Armenia, would not have touched the world's heart as it has. Because it is true, it is the limit beyond which we cannot make sacrifices to peace. If America sacrificed that, as the President said, it would cease to be America, and we would deprive ourselves of the very foundation upon which alone we can hope to build the great cosmopolitan commonwealth of free, liberty-loving people, for which past generations have given their lives and blood and treasure.

America has chosen to be more than a race. It has chosen to be a segment of humanity, of diverse inheritances and histories and sentiments. It has staked its existence upon the free interplay of humanness, upon the co-operation of sovereign individuals working with a common will toward a just and humane commonwealth. We are that or nothing. If we sacrifice that we will be nothing.

EXAMINE YOUR PEACH TREES.

Peach growers will find on examining their trees that quite a percentage of the buds have been killed due to the warm spell we had several weeks ago, which was followed by low temperatures. Thus in many cases the crop will be very light and this season is particularly good for cutting back and renewing the tops on old trees and trees that have made very little growth last season. It will also enable the obtaining of several more crops of fruit from old trees which are near the end of their usefulness.

There are only a few weeks for the pruning season and the work should be cleaned up before the rush of the spring work. During this month the trees should be sprayed with commercial lime and sulphur to overcome the San Jose scale and peach leaf curl.

Any questions arising as to pruning or spraying of trees will be cheerfully answered by the County Farm Demonstrator, Irving L. Owen, either by letter or by a personal visit to your farm if you wish it.

SENATOR CHARLES O'CONNOR HENNESSY.

The Bergen senator, candidate for the governorship, said in a recent speech: "We cannot make a proud and prosperous state with merely 'business government.' We must fight the poverty disease; make more jobs for idle men on the farm and in the factory, better wages and salaries for the employed and more profits for the manufacturer and tradesman. I will try in this campaign to point the way to all this."

SPORTING COMMENT.

SCULLY MAY PLAY INITIAL

SACK FOR PRINCETON NINE

Princeton, March 8.—There is some excellent material here for a well-balanced team this spring, but Coach Bill Clark of the Princeton baseball squad faces the difficult problem of molding the men into shape. Last year there was a tendency to blow up at critical times, to throw away games which a little more quick thinking and a little more team work might have saved.

While the loss of Gill, Hanks, Hoyt and Salmon of last year's varsity will be felt, it will not prove a very serious handicap owing to the excellence of last year's substitutes. The pitching prospects are more encouraging than they have been for several seasons and the receiving end of the battery is also well fortified.

In addition to the three regulars Devo, Link and Chaplin, all of whom pitched steady ball last spring, there are several rookies available. Lamberton, though erratic, has worked in many varsity games and may prove of use in the box this spring, when not used in the outfield. Thompson and Dowd of last year's freshman team should also prove valuable timber for the pitching staff. In spite of the loss of Salmon the backstop position should be well taken care of by Driggs and B. Douglas.

If Douglas is shifted from first base to behind the bat it will leave a hole in the infield for Coach Clark to fill.

Scully at First, Maybe. If this shift is made, Scully, last year's second baseman, and son of Congressman Scully of South Amboy will probably be used on the first sack. Shea, who was a substitute infield last year, seems the logical choice for third. Rothenals, a new man, is showing up well at short stop and may be retained in that position. If such is the case Captain Law will be moved to second base. It was expected that Hoyt would be the mainstay of the outfield but his enforced retirement from the game will necessitate an entirely new trio, unless Driggs can be spared as a catcher, which is hardly probable. Among other candidates for the outfield are Tibbott Cory and Keating, who showed improvement last season. It is also possible that Chaplin and Lamberton will be used in the outfield when they are not pitching.

The work so far this year has consisted mainly of battery practice and short batting and fielding drills in the cage. The season will be ushered in March 25.

The Rev. Clarence C. Sylvester, Rector of St. John's Church, Somerville, is the special preacher for next Sunday evening. Now that we are to have the visiting clergy throughout the Lenten season, it's high time that we begin to blush for the small attendance at the Sunday evening services. Hitherto, unless it be the occasion of the Bishop's visitation or some like event, about 75 people seems to be our limit for these evening services. Please remember that this service is something more than a devotional exercise for the choir and clergyman. By all means, let us grant our visiting clergy a good hearing!

The Rev. Mr. Sylvester, it may be interesting to recall, before going to Somerville was on the staff at St. Bartholomew's Church, New York City, which is now preparing to expend the small sum of $7,000,000, on what promises to be the most magnificent parish church in America.

We are fortunate in securing as next Tuesday night fester, Rector of St. sh, Plainfield. The er was formerly an a the Diocese of Long forget to get a copy of ard and look over the good preachers we have you this Lent.

service on Friday afternoons throughout Lent will be one that every housewife can attend. The service will begin promptly at 4 o'clock, and will close promptly at 4.30. The choir will assist with the music and the Rector will give a brief talk.

The Rector had the pleasure of preaching to a good congregation at St. Peter's Church on the night of Ash Wednesday. The Rector of St. Peter's has done a great work there, and we heartily congratulate both priest and people.

That is not the best sermon which makes the hearers go away talking to one another, and praising the speaker; but that which makes them go away thoughtful and serious, and hastening to be alone. And not infrequently the best sermon is the one that riles and displeases us.

Because of the awful blizzard which began raging about noon on last Monday, the motion picture benefit given by the Girls' Friendly Society in the Empire Theatre was considerably curtailed in the attendance. At this writing, no definite report can be made as to the net profits, but it is feared that they will be somewhat meager. We are sorry that the girls should have encountered such untoward weather conditions, but we congratulate them upon their zeal in selling tickets in advance, thus saving the enterprise from complete wreck. We desire to thank the management of the Empire for manifold courtesies and particularly Mr. Theodore Manduka for having provided us with such an excellent film. "York State Folks" made a decided hit and it is regrettable indeed that so many of our people were obliged to forego the pleasure of seeing it.

The Rector's out-of-town preaching engagement for next week is on Thursday at St. Paul's Church, Westfield.

In these days of vaunted neutrality, let us not be too severe upon our "hyphenated" friends. They are Americans from choice, while we who are native-born are Americans by necessity. If there is any difference between us, it is that the German-American came into this country with his trousers on, while the other came into it naked.

Here's a suggestion that will help you to "save up" for the Easter Offering on April 23: By practicing some little act of self-denial, lay aside five cents each day. Counting the Sundays in the Lenten season, (46 days), this would amount to $2.30. Of course, there are many who can, ought, and will give much more than that, but there are few people who could not lay aside a "nickel a day." Try it and see!

The Rector attended the meeting of the Plainfield Clericus, which was en-

st. apart a church. a the Sunday ay. Besides the ice, there will be one or two red numbers rendered by the phonograph, which a portion of the children's Christmas offering helped to purchase.

Fenton, Luke's, the subject being "The poor in his n. ty. Among the visitors at the us we were glad to see the Rector, Emeritus, the Rev. H. M. P. Pearse. We were sorry to learn that Mrs. Pearse is in poor health of late.

Here's a "railroad" blessing for the babies of Christ Church Parish: "The babies—God bless them! May their route through life be pleasant and profitable; their ties well laid; their track straightforward, and not backwards. May their fathers be safe conductors, their mothers faithful tenders, and their switch never displaced."

Ye dominie has received a present of a very beautiful oak taboret, fumed-oak finish, from Mrs. Elizabeth Pearce. This piece of furniture was made entirely by her nephew, Master Howard King, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Preston H. King, and would be a credit to any workman. So much for manual training in our schools.

At a revival meeting in a Methodist Church in a western town, several of the new converts requested that instead of being sprinkled they should be baptized by immersion. The church not being provided with a pool, one of the leading laymen constituted himself a committee of one to call upon the ruling lay spirit of the Baptist Church and proceeded to ask a favor that the Methodist converts be immersed in the Baptist pool.

"What? Immerse Methodists in our pool?" ejaculated the Baptist "pillar." "Certainly, We would appreciate the kindness very much, and—"

"Well, go back and tell your church that our church isn't taking in any washing."

All of which reminds us of the revival which was being held in a colored Baptist Church in Georgia. At one of the meetings the evangelist, after an earnest but fruitless exhortation, requested all of the congregation who wanted their souls washed white as snow to stand up. One old darky remained sitting.

"Doan' yo' want y' soul washed w'ite as snow, Brudder Jones?" "Mah soul done been washed w'ite as snow, pahson."

"Whah wuz yo' soul washed w'ite as snow, Brudder Jones?" "Over yander to de Methodis' chu'ch across de railroad."

"Brudder Jones, yo' soul wa'n't washed, hit were dry-cleaned."

The social given by the Men's Club on Tuesday night was the most pleasant affair yet given by the organization, and that is speaking in superlatives. About fifty men were present. The concert on the new victrola was thoroughly enjoyed. The committee appointed to purchase a phonograph and records for the parish house made a detailed report showing that up to the present time 107 records had been purchased at a cost of $101.50. The Sunday School already having purchased 21 records, this makes a total of 128 records. It was voted to continue the committee indefinitely, in order that the number may be increased from month to month, as new records are announced in the catalog. The committee would be glad to receive suggestions at any time from members of the club as to any preference for particular records. Next week we hope to give in "The Chronicle" a list of the records purchased.

St. Martha's Club, as usual, did themselves proud when it came to serving up the lunch, which was a most excellent one consisting of chicken sandwiches, cheese, pepper and lettuce sandwiches, coffee and cake. Mrs. Hattie Wilson, the president, was assisted in the preparation and serving of the lunch by the following: Mrs. Barker, Mrs. Lloyd Wortley, Mrs. W. P. Nichols, Mrs. C. S. Stults, Mrs. George H. Mack, Mrs. Alfred J. Miller, Mrs. Alonzo Grace, Mrs. Will Chapman, Mrs. Donald W. Reed, Mrs. C. S. Parker, Mrs. C. S. Lewis and Miss Marjorie Kerr. The club voted a neat sum to the Guild for their delightful lunch.

At the May meeting the speaker will be the Rev. E. S. Harper, Rector of All Saints' Church, Brooklyn. He will give another of his interesting travelogues.

Flowers for the altar were given last Sunday by Mrs. Mary E. Greene, in memory of her son, Lafayette.

This delightful roly poly is the two-year-old newest baby in Mrs. Calvert's outdoor kindergarten at One Hundred and Sixteenth Street and Morningside Park, New York City. Most schools stop in June, but this outdoor one goes all the year, and the children play even in snowstorms. When it rains very hard Mrs. Calvert takes them home with her and buries fishes and charming seashells in her sand pile for them to dig out with little red and blue shovels. When Jack Frost takes charge of the park the children run and skip and do ring games like "Yes, I know the mufin man," and "Once there was a princess" to keep from getting cold toes. This also gives them red cheeks and happy dispositions. In the spring the park commissioner lets the children have four benches for a "house," and their teacher tells them lovely stories about the park flowers and leaves. Hot days they braid mats and learn to count by doing examples on the asphalt walks with pretty colored crayons. In the fall their teacher tells them all about seed babies and autumn leaves. Outdoors from 9 till 6 every day but Sundays is much nicer than going to school indoors. Don't you think so, too?

About Magnets. The natural magnet, or lodestone, is an ore of iron, every molecule of which is composed of three atoms of iron and four atoms of oxygen gas.

This lodestone has the power of attracting small pieces of iron and if balanced and suspended will point nearly north and south.

Artificial magnets are pieces of iron or steel which have been under the action of either the lodestone or other magnets or of an electric current, or have been subjected to percussion while in certain positions.

Permanent magnets are those which retain their magnetic properties permanently. They are made of hard steel, in bars or bent in the form of a horseshoe.

Temporary magnets are those which retain their magnetic properties only as long as they are under the influence of other magnets or an electric current. They are bars of soft iron, either straight or bent like a horseshoe.

The poles of a magnet are the two points of greatest attraction and repulsion. They are near the two ends.

Behead a low seat and leave a carpenter's necessity. Behead a hurt and leave a part of the human body.

"Weezy Deezy." The "weezy deezy" game is played as follows: Any number of boys and girls can participate.

Two players are chosen. One is named Weezy and the other Deezy. They are then blindfolded and supposed to be helpless. Weezy shouts, "Won't somebody here please help me and take this Deezy away?" Deezy shouts out: "There is somebody here annoying me. Won't somebody take him away from me?"

One player then pulls Weezy away, and another pulls Deezy away. Weezy and Deezy must then guess who pulled them away. If they can't guess correctly, then the players who pulled them away become Weezy and Deezy.

Report of last meeting of council states that new water ordinance would strip the Water Commissioner of everything but his title. Mr. Commissioner, if the ordinance is signed by the Mayor, won't you please be discreet?

Bought a dozen of "strictly fresh" eggs the other day. One had a name and address written on the shell, but the writing was faded and undecipherable. Upon opening the egg the question immediately asked was: Did Naomi, daughter of Enoch, send out this hen fruit when she was a very young girl? Apologies to C. C. C.

P. A. Evening News asks: "Wonder what the ground hog thinks of himself, anyway?" He probably feels the same as did Otto Swenbor when he was rescued by the News while drifting out to sea on a cake of ice.

See an enterprising local merchant is advertising postage stamps for sale. Always heard there was no profit in sugar, but how much can be made on stamps?

Clerk in a local store one day last week was offered a tip to buy candy with. Is she the candy kid? Guess not, for she refused the tip.

An ad in Citizen offers a twin baby carriage for sale. How about it, don't they think lightning ever strikes twice in the same place?

The State Board of Regents of N. Y. has gone on record as being opposed to military training in the schools. Will the News class them as would-be educators, too?

What's your side line? We have with us the telegrapher-grocery clerk; the truant officer-movie manager-railroad detective; the reporter-telegrapher-private secretary, and the dominie-justice of the peace-news-paper correspondent. Next.

A confession! Reference recently made in this column to the party possessing the facial orifice of a behemoth and the grey matter of a somewhat youngish and unsophisticated bivalve was meant for no particular person. So clam yourselves, you who have been in doubt. By the way, what kind of a noise annoys the lamellibranchiata?

Have you ever been in that store on Broadway where the clerks spend most of their time kidding the girls? No wonder they bring you a bag of flour when you ask for a cake of soap. Lignum-vitæ? Sure, from the neck up.

PROMISED TO LEAVE TOWN.

On Thursday afternoon Officer Gleason arrested Mille Dolsinger on complaint of Oliver Parisen. Mr. Parisen claimed that the woman had taken a valuable fob belonging to him. A CORRECTION.

Last week The Citizen published an article purporting to be an account of a party given by Miss Mary Keys of Stockton street. It was received through the mail and signed, "Mrs. P. Keys." Mrs. Keys called at The Citizen office on Tuesday and stated that the write-up was a fraud, that she never sent it, and evidently it was the work of some antagonistic neighbor. That Miss Keys did entertain a few friends was admitted by Mrs. Keys, but not those whose names were published, and that the party broke up about 9 o'clock, instead of 1 o'clock. Neither her nor Mrs. Kendall were attired as stated, nor was Mr. John Connelly present. So far as a "toast" being given to Miss Keys it was deliberate falsehood. The christian name of Miss Keys was also erroneously stated.

The Citizen published the article in good faith, and is always glad to get reports on social affairs, but it represents being duped. For the information of the writer we would state that a fine of $100 can be placed on a sender of false accounts to newspapers, and the signing of another's name to the article subjects them to a penalty for fraud, and if the name of the writer is found out Mrs. Keys could have them punished severely.

A man never knows what a woman thinks of him—nor does she.
